Blood, other testimony prompt Sheridan arrest

By RAYMOND L. SMITH
Call and Post Staff Writer

The husband of the woman found dead in the rear of her 1987 Plymouth Sundance was arrested Friday as a result of evidence that causes police to believe that the murder occurred within the family home.

Blood samples found in the den of the couple's home and other forensic evidence convinced police investigators that Deborah L. Sheridan, 33, was murdered in her home and then taken to the Berwick Shopping Plaza, where her body was left to be found.
The couple lived at 3132 Lake Park Dr.
The car and the body was found at 6 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 1.

Mrs. Sheridan's body had 3 to 6 stab wounds in its upper torso, her nose was broken and there was severe bruising across her upper body and head.

Solomon Sheridan, the deceased's husband, was arrested and charged with the murder, Saturday, Jan. 9, a day after Mrs. Sheridan's funeral.

"We had enough evidence to arrest Mr.
Sheridan prior to the funeral, but we made a decision to wait until after it concluded because of the children," said Homicide Det. Roy Scott. "They have been through a lot and we felt they should have the support of the father at a time like this."

The couple has two children,
Solomon David, 10, and Shawn D., 8.
Mr. Sheridan was identified as the crime's primary suspect due to a combination of evidences, including conflicting testimony, dust and other

FAMILIES TORN APART -- The families of Deborah and Solomon Sheridan are grieving the loss of Deborah and the arrest of Solomon. Deborah's body was found at the Berwick Plaza Shopping Center parking lot on New Year's Day. Solomon was arrested after homicide detectives found a substance on Deborah's body that matched a substance in the Sheridans' home. Pictured are Alberta Sheridan (getting

E'side woman says police brutalized her

By GILBERT PRICE
Call and Post Political Editor

Karen Draughan is 4'11 and 130 pounds -- not a very imposing sight.
And the mother of three has no criminal record.

But Draughan has charged that a Columbus police officer treated her like a dangerous felon, placing her in a headlock that has caused her to receive treatment from a doctor. And that the officer, Daniel Cockerham, alluded to the Rodney King incident in dealing with her.

Draughan is pursuing a complaint with the Division of Police, charging Cockerham with police brutality. Safety Director Leonard Keller said the department would investigate any complaint raised by the woman.

According to Draughan, Cockerham and another officer knocked on her door on Thursday, January 7, with the intent to impound a car owned by a friend of Draughan's, Arnold Floyd. The car was parked across the street from Draughan's house, and had a cracked windshield. Floyd was being charged with having no operator's license,
Draughan said.

Draughan said that Cockerham had asked her who owned the car, and she said "Bill" Floyd was the owner. Although Floyd's given name is "Arnold," Draughan said, he prefers to go by the name Bill.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, DR. KING

THE DREAM, THE DREAM -- The nation across the country will celebrate the legacy of the dream and the birth of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. King, a dedicated civil rights leader, worked tirelessly to advance the rights of the underprivileged. His efforts helped to end legal racial segregation as a means of limiting opportunities. More than 5,000 will attend a SOLD OUT Jan. 15 broadcast tribute to King at The Ohio Center's Battelle Hall. Other events are planned across the city. (See page 1C)

Ed Hogan, director of both multicul-tural and legislative affairs with The Success Group, a lobbying organization, knows about "reaching back". He has two success stories to prove it is possible to get even former convicted criminals to make the adjustments necessary to lead productive lives.

Hogan's suggestion to those who say there is "no way out" and feel trapped by the circumstances that lead to crime is:
"kill yourself." There is always "a way out", Hogan believes, and "we have a responsibility to ourselves."

He comes from a background of incarceration himself, having served 17 years for murder and armed robbery. Although he doesn't like to talk about it, Hogan had been associated with the Black Panther Party in California and feels that that organization's acceptance of violence to achieve political objectives provided the perfect excuse for him to "act out" his own anger. His acting out cost him three years in the California prison system.

The bulk of his time, however, was served in the Ohio prisons, from the Ohio Penitentiary to Lucasville to London to Orient.

Paroled in 1985, Hogan was hired as an errand man by Dennis Wojtanowski of The Success Group. Wojtanowski had served on the Ohio Correctional Institution Inspection Committee as a state-representative from Lake and Geauga counties. In that position, he got the letter from Hogan that began their relationship.

After demonstrating his verbal and networking abilities inside The Success Group, Hogan was offered a position as governmental affairs liaison officer. He now heads both the multicultural and governmental affairs departments at The Success Group.

Once on the road to establishing himself in the Columbus community, Hogan, a board member of Maryhaven, a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center, encouraged two of his "comrades" to take entry level positions there until they could find their own way in the labor markets.

SILENCE PROTECTS NO ONE

Mother of domestic violence victim says 'get out and speak up'

By PAMELA D. CARTER
Call and Post Staff Writer

The mother of a domestic violence-homicide victim said she has not been able to sleep since hearing about the murder of Deborah Sheridan, whose body was found in her car at the rear of the Berwick Plaza Shopping Center parking lot on New Year's Day. Clara Velt said Sheridan's death brought back painful memories of how her own daughter, Claudia Knight, died. Knight, a financial aid counselor at Columbus State Community College, was killed in the spring of 1992.

Knight's body was found in her car behind the Kroger Store on High Street by her sister, Dianna Velt and Knight's husband, Roger. Knight had been badly beaten and strangled.

After an intensive investigation and forensic lab results, police arrested Roger for Knight's murder. Police said Knight had purchased groceries at the store shortly before her death. Homicide detectives linked Roger to Knight's death by the grocery receipt. They said there were food items on the receipt that were missing. These missing food items were later found in Roger's residence during a search.

Roger's murder trial is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, Feb. 2, for the death of his wife.

Now, with the death of Sheridan and the arrest of her husband, Solomon, Clara is reliving her family's nightmare from which she has not yet awakened.

Although it has not been proven that Deborah was a victim of domestic violence, Homicide Detective Roy Scott, said he has received reports from co-workers indicating Mrs. Sheridan may have been abused.

Neither Knight or Sheridan are reported to have filed complaints against their husbands for abuse. However, in Claudia's case, Clara said there were subtle hints that she was afraid for her safety.

"Claudia would constantly ask me if I thought that Roger would do something to her and I would tell her 'no', that men just had a lot of mouth," Clara said. "I think we, as parents, need to listen to our children more intently. I know now that this was Claudia's way of crying out for help."

King breakfast to be broadcast on Channel TV-8

On Monday, Jan. 18, the Ohio Center is expected to be filled to capacity for this year's Martin Luther King Jr. Breakfast Celebration. This event has become the premier event in the African-American community over the last several years. So much so, that many of the people who would like to attend simply are not able to do so because of the rapid way the event is sold out.

Understanding that this event would like to be shared by more people than the event itself can accommodate, the Call and Post Newspaper has joined with TV-8 to broadcast the breakfast on a time delayed basis to the city of Columbus via TV-8. The program featuring highlights of the breakfast complete with the keynote address delivered in its entirety, will air on TV-8 Wednesday, evening at 7 and again on Friday at 7 p.m. At the time of this writing the mechanics for having the program appear on both Coaxial and Warner Cable were being discussed.

Cons

demonstrated the attitude that convinced Hogan that both could make the transition back to freedom with a little help.

Green had discovered his own artistic ability while incarcerated for robbery in Cincinnati. He had been an active drug user and actually classified himself as an "addict." He had gone into the Marines in 1965 and gotten out in 1967.

For two years after his discharge, he says he had no problems. Then one day, Green felt that "the world was caving in on him." He couldn't sleep and felt he would lose his mind. Drugs were his "way out"; he robbed and stole to support his habit.

In prison, he thought he would "die of a broken heart" when he found out that his daughter and mother-in-law were both killed by his ex-wife's new husband. At that point, Green felt that he had no choice but to turn to God.

"God gave me the will to turn my life around," said Green, who now describes himself as a spiritual, not a religious, person. Recovery, to him, is based on that acceptance.

In prison, Green received a bachelors degree in theology and an associates degree. He placed second in the Ohio Penal Education Consortium's juried art exhibition in 1988 and first in 1989.

At Lucasville, he set up an art program and was an institutional artist at Marion Correctional. His art expresses social issues such as homelessness, starvation, children killing children, as well as other pictures he "sees in his mind."

Says Green, "my heart is in helping other human beings. People need to know there is life after addiction. Addiction can't be cured but the disease can be arrested."

Hogan convinced Paul Coleman, president at Maryhaven, to give Green and Moore a second chance. Coleman replied "if Maryhaven doesn't stand for the proposition that people deserve a second chance, I don't know what our mission is."

Green is a part-time drug counselor and Moore is a food service supervisor there.

Officer Cockerham challenged her regarding Floyd's name, accusing her of lying. Later, Draughan asserted, she had asked the officer if she could get a key off the key chain of the car, which was running at the time. Draughan said she looked on the key chain for her key, found it was not there, and handed the key to the officer.

At this point, Draughan charged that Cockerham told her, "get your in the house." While she was walking across the street, Draughan said that Cockerham came up behind her, clotheslined her neck, and picked her up off the ground and was choking her. Later, he cited her for "obstructing official business," -- the impounding of the car.

Draughan said that, while the officer was placing her in the car, it appeared that others in the neighborhood were observing the action. Apparently in allusion to the Rodney King incident, in which the Los Angeles police attack was captured by an amateur camcorder operator, Cockerham was alleged by Draughan to have said, "I don't care if they've got their ing camcorders. -- a camcorder."

Draughan's story was corroborated by Floyd, who said of Cockerham, "the guy acted as if he had already had a problem." Floyd said that Cockerham "grabbed her from the back of the neck, grabbed her backwards, yanked her to the car and put the handcuffs on her."

Floyd said that Cockerham was "calling her out of her name, calling her 'b...'s and so forth." When Floyd asked Cockerham to stop, Floyd alleged that Cockerham told him, "If (Floyd) got up in his face, he was going to try hard to break my back."

Although Floyd was cited for no operator's license; the "official business" which Cockerham accused Draughan of obstructing -- the impounding of the car -- never occurred.

Floyd said that Cockerham told him "he was doing me a favor" by calling off the impoundment of the car. And the car, as of Monday, was still sitting where it had been stopped by Officer Cockerham.

Draughan said she is under a doctor's care because of the incident. "My adam's apple's swollen, my lower back's hurting," Draughan said. "I'm not hardly going to let this go."

"I felt it was unnecessary," Draughan said of Cockerham's actions. "I wasn't fighting or anything."

Safety Director Leonard Keller, when asked about the event, said he expected it would be investigated.

"If the officer's conduct was improper, we will investigate, and if we find there's a problem, we will correct it," Keller said. "I don't want any officer to think they are above or beyond the law."

"We have an obligation to police our own before we police the community, and we'll stand by that," Keller added.

fibers found on Mrs. Sheridan's body, as well as blood samples found in the carpet of the couple's home.

While examining Mrs. Sheridan's body, homicide detectives noticed a gray dust-like matter on her clothing. Later, while taking testimony from Mrs. Sheridan's relatives in her home, the detectives once again saw the same gray dust-like material.

Based on what has been identified as conflicting testimony given by Mr. Sheridan as well as other evidence, investigators had probable cause to get a search warrant for the Sheridan home. Inside the house, more forensic tests were used which enabled the police to find blood samples in the den's carpeting. The police also found a quick-drying cement substance, that investigators believe is identical to the substance found on Mrs. Sheridan's body.

Police investigators would not say if the instrument used to stab Mrs. Sheridan has been found.

Interviews with friends and co-workers by police investigators indicated that there may have been a history of domestic violence within the home, said Scott. But, according to the officer, there are no official domestic violence reports in court records.

Prior to his arrest, Mr. Sheridan told the Call and Post that his wife was "someone who did anything to make others smile. She was always concerned about others' feelings. She lived a Christian life."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan are reported to have been raised in religious homes and to have strong affiliations to the church. The Sheridan family belongs to Full Gospel Pentecostal Holiness Church. Mrs. Sheridan was a singer with the Toney Sisters.

During police questioning prior to his arrest, Mr. Sheridan had told investigators that money and jewelry were stolen from his wife's body.

Co-workers interviewed by the Call and Post expressed shock and sadness about the murder of Mrs. Sheridan and the arrest of her husband.

The couple is described as "very professional," but "close."

"They came to work together and, often, left together," said a co-worker who asked not to be identified. "They were an out-going and friendly couple," said another co-worker.

"You could not imagine anything like this happening to them," described another co-worker. "If something like this could happen to Deborah, it can happen to anyone. She was such a good person. She was not a person who was out on the street all the time partying. She appeared to be a good wife and mother. You never know."

The couple had been married for 13 years. They knew one another since junior high school and were high school sweethearts. They married when he was 21 and she was 20.

Attempts by the Call and Post to talk to Solomon and Alberta Sheridan, Mr. Sheridan's parents, were unsuccessful. The family of Mrs. Sheridan has decided to withhold comment about the case until after the completion of the investigation and the trial.

Mr. Sheridan was arraigned on Monday, Jan. 11, before Judge Teresa Liston. At Call and Post press time, Mr. Sheridan was in jail in lieu of an $100,000 cash bond.

There were two education funds begun for the Sheridan children. One fund, created by Mr. Sheridan at Central Ohio Bank One branches, is an on-going fund that can be contributed to by going to any Bank One and donating to the Deborah L. Sheridan Memorial Fund. The second fund was created by the Ohio Government and Public Affairs Division of the Bureau of Workers' Compensation.

IN OUR OPINION

The King of Peace

At a time when America's racial divide seems as vast and impenetrable as ever, the words of Dr. Martin Luther King continue to call to us.

In the face of troubling racism -- when many so-called liberals and moderates preached accommodation to this raging evil -- Dr. King cried out that "injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere."

To Black audiences who felt betrayed by an American society that refused to hear their pleas for justice, King's hope was clear. No people, he informed us, "is the sum total of its degradation."

And to all who felt that the American apartheid in which millions, Black and white, were caught in a horrifying nightmare, Dr. King rang out, "I have a dream."

Great words all. But the legacy of Dr. King is more than stirring, poetic words. The legacy is one of extraordinary courage against impossible odds -- a courage that was the product of an iron will forged in the crucible of an undying faith in God.

Over the past few years, much has been written to try to bring this giant of history down to size. The world has learned of flaws in his character and problems in his movement.

Yet nothing can destroy the majesty of what Dr. King -- and countless others with whom he must share this holiday honor -- accomplished. Their unshakable courage, personal tenacity, and political and social vision have not only transformed the south; they have transformed the nation.

In Birmingham, where Eugene Connor's dogs savaged a people seeking freedom, a Black man, Richard Arrington, now leads the city. The shackles of de jure desegregation have long ago been broken, and Blacks have gained political, economic and social power that could only be imagined when the civil rights warriors fought their struggles.

But as we recall this all-too-mortal King of Peace, this day must not be simply one of remembrance, but of rededication. While many battles have been won, the war is not over. Sadly, we are seeing a resurgence of racism and hatred in the United States, from Los Angeles to Howard Beach and Crown Heights and points in between. There remains a need for each of us, in our own way, to promote the dream of harmony, equality and equity that Dr. King both lived and died for.

Stop Saddam

Like a spoiled child who can't learn to behave, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein continues to thumb his nose at the United Nations and the United States. In his latest antics, he has continuously violated the UN-imposed "no fly zone," moved anti-aircraft missiles into the area, and now has made an unauthorized incursion into Kuwait to recover military hardware that was abandoned by his forces during the Persian Gulf War.

For some reason, Saddam underestimates the resolve of the world community, and particularly that of the United States and President Bush. He has already been taught a harsh lesson, and probably feels confident that public opinion would prevent a large redeployment of forces to keep him in check.

However, nothing could be further from the truth. The territorial integrity of Kuwait is a major concern of the world community, and Saddam's disruptive effect on Middle East peace is being watched carefully.

Policy Change Needed

Earlier this week, the U.S. Coast Guard sent over 200 more Haitians back to Haiti. This group had been spotted in the Caribbean, in a boat that was so overloaded that it was about to sink.

From a humanitarian standpoint, it is commendable that the Coast Guard would rescue those whose lives are in danger on the high seas. However, the new administration should promptly revisit our nation's policy of repatriation.

Perhaps, one way to solve the problem would be to look at the causes of the mass exodus from the tiny island-nation. Anarchy and extreme poverty have been a way of life in Haiti for several years, and the United Nations and other regional groups have done little to intervene. Perhaps, if steps were taken by the world community to solve or alleviate these problems, the temptation to risk death in order to escape would diminish.

However, until such reforms are brought about in Haiti, it is unrealistic to simply open the doors to all who wish to come to the United States for whatever reason. But to the extent that the doors are opened, we hope that they will be opened

The wrong message

When Columbus Safety Director Leonard Keller decided to overrule Chief James Jackson's recommendation to terminate Sgt. Daniel Zoretic for his improper shooting at an individual on April 11, 1992, he defended the decision, in part, as being generally well-received:

"The only one who's had a problem with the decision is the chief," Keller was quoted as saying.

Unfortunately, we disagree -- both with the ruling and the comment. There are a number of people in the community who resent the idea that a white officer can fire into an automobile without probable cause and retain his job.

At the same time, when a Black officer, James Shivers, is similarly accused of improperly firing his weapon at an individual, he is dismissed.

This creates the appearance of a double standard. This creates the sense among some Blacks that police officers -- or, at least, white police officers -- can act in ways that injure or endanger the same Black citizens they are duty-bound to protect, and the chain of command will not address the problem.

To recount the case: Sgt. Zoretic and several other officers were attempting to monitor a crowd on East Livingston Ave. After a shot rang out, Zoretic responded -- at least 20 seconds later, according to a 500-page investigation report -- by firing two shots into a car driven by William Pate.

A later investigation showed that the shot fired at police was not fired by Pate at all, but came from a nearby restaurant.

The action of Zoretic could potentially have precipitated a Los Angeles-style riot. The massive crowd, coupled with Zoretic's palpably-wrong action, could have resulted in Columbus feeling the flames that engulfed L.A. only 18 days later. The safety director should certainly have weighed the possible impact of Zoretic's actions in evaluating his penalty.

All this does, apparently, is keep up a longtime record: according to one police observer, it has been almost 28 years since a Columbus city police officer has been dismissed for brutality or action taken against a Black Columbus citizen. The record is full of white officers -- Michael Exline; Edward "Machine Gun" Morgan; Zoretic, and others -- who have been accused of serious actions against Blacks, but have been able to remain as police officers because the system has failed to fully carry out punishment.

Can Black citizens expect justice in a system which seems to repeatedly, year after year, director after director, defend its white police officers accused of wrongdoing? That is the question which some Blacks do have. We believe that this is not the message that Safety Director Keller wanted to send.

But, unfortunately, that was the message his action sent.

In on the action?

In the years of fighting for Black political, economic and social power, one of the major reasons for the effort was the need for inclusion. As decisions were being made about the expenditure of the nation's resources, the argument was made, Blacks were deliberately excluded from the process, and thus the process did not serve to benefit Blacks. Only with the inclusion of Blacks in the process would the process be fair to all, the advocates of Black inclusion asserted.

Now, the construction of a major project in the city of Cincinnati has all the earmarks of inclusion. Unfortunately for several parties, that inclusion in the process has brought with it an unflattering look at how the project is being built.

The project is a state arts center, housing two indoor theaters with a total of 3,050 seats, which is being proposed for downtown Cincinnati. The $40 million project is being backed by a political action committee called Cincinnatians to Protect Jobs, Education and Entertainment, a group comprised of several of the city's banks and such major corporations as Procter & Gamble and General Electric.

The arts center has been opposed as unnecessary by a group called ARTS, which includes some representatives of the Cincinnati arts community.

The project itself has all the earmarks of inclusion. A construction manager on the project is the Cargile Construction Co., owned by longtime Black contractor William Cargile. And the PAC which was backing the arts building enlisted the efforts of Sharon Bowen, wife of Senator William F. Bowen, to garner support during a referendum battle for the project.

But those very aspects of inclusion are now coming under fire. Published reports have linked the Cargile Co. with state senate president Stanley Aronoff, who is a big backer of the arts center. Aronoff has been the longtime attorney for Cargile's company.

And the opponents of the arts center have questioned the ethics of Senator Bowen's wife receiving funds to support a project on which the senator may have a critical legislative role.

"I would say it's a pretty transparent use of the wife of a state official," the Cleveland Plain Dealer quoted James Selonick, president of ARTS, as saying. "She gets paid, and he helps to write the budget that is body being paid to do something."

The Cincinnati arts project is a perfect example of the role of politics in the decision-making on major projects -- and the inclusion that has been fostered by Black participation in the political arena.

The project itself is being funded by the Ohio Building Authority -- despite the fact that in a referendum of Cincinnati voters on November 3, the project was rejected. Its backers include the Cincinnati political and business elite.

Now, after a long history of political involvement, that political and business elite includes some Blacks. In a 25-year political career that began as a community activist and head of the Cincinnati NAACP, Sen. William F. Bowen has become one of the most powerful legislators in the state -- of either political party or color. He served for several years as a member of the powerful State Controlling Board, which reviews the state's major unbuilt contracts. When Democrats controlled the Senate in 1983-84, Bowen was chairman of the powerful Finance Committee, and when the Democrats lost control he afterward served as its ranking minority member.

Cargile, at the same time, has been a leading contractor in the Cincinnati community for more than two decades. For years, he has been listed on the Black Enterprise top 100 companies, one of six or seven of those firms from Ohio.

When the political and business leaders of Cincinnati want to get something done, they must now go through Black leaders such as Bowen and Cargile. But sometimes when that happens, it opens those Black leaders up to uncomfortable investigation.

That is sometimes the price that Black leaders have to pay for being in on the action.

The Natural way to get rid of AIDS

Between January 22 and 28, Tony Brown's Journal (PBS-TV) will present "A Message To Arthur Ashe and Magic Johnson" (Show #1601).

The significance of the program and its message goes far beyond these two great athletes and role models. It goes to the heart of what is at issue in the alleged Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) epidemic.

If all you know about AIDS is what you see on TV news and read in newspapers -- that is, that everyone with a positive response to the so-called AIDS test (which is actually not a test for "AIDS," but a HIV-antibody test) will go on to get AIDS and die from it, after temporarily postponing death with a toxic chemical treatment -- you may find the claims made on this program to be untrue or even preposterous.

Speaking of preposterous, Dr. Robert Gallo, the government AIDS superstar researcher and the man who gave us the myth that a single virus, HIV, along causes all of these diseases called AIDS, was found guilty last week of "committing scientific misconduct" by the Health and Human Services' Office of Research Integrity.

Not one life has been saved by Gallo's theory or the toxic chemicals approved and prescribed as treatment. And in the cases where the viral strain is resistant to AZT, the claim cannot any longer be made that this chemical therapy even prolongs life.

Contrary to accepted dogma, there is life after HIV and AIDS, and without toxic drugs, despite the lies we get from the media via our government.

Because of the government's emphasis on "catching" AIDS and not "acquiring" AIDS, thousands are dying and waiting to die, taking toxic chemicals as a "treatment" and waiting for a promised "miracle" vaccine that can't come. A vaccine is impossible because "AIDS" is currently described as "almost 30 various diseases."

"Never has there been one disease caused by so many germs," wrote Dr. Laurence E. Badgley as he pointed out the faulty logic in the government's premise, which can only result in more suffering and death.

"If AIDS continues to be promoted as a classic infectious plague caused by HIV, one which gobbles up almost every disease symptom known to man, it will obscure other existing sources of ill-health and immune-suppression," wrote Jon Rappoport in AIDS INC. (Human Energy Press, 415/588-4495), the boldest book I have ever read on AIDS.

Our immune systems simply cannot handle the overload of drugs, malnutrition, environmental pollution and rampant, unprotected sexual exposure. This societal lifestyle -- not some "miracle" AIDS virus that attacks a perfect group of humans -- causes or "acquires" what we are now calling AIDS.

With that explanation, the "cure" becomes pretty apparent: All of us, especially those in high-risk, drug-using groups -- subsets of homosexuals, Blacks, Hispanics and all drug addicts -- must rid (detoxify) our bodies of toxic substances using non-drug approaches and practice hygienic, safer sex.

That brings us back to Magic Johnson and Arthur Ashe and how they can rid their bodies of the poisons that they have "acquired" as a result of lifestyle (in Ashe's case, an accident while receiving contaminated blood).

Can they be successfully treated for what is currently being called AIDS? According to health advocate Dr. Gary Null, the answer is yes, and he appears on Tony Brown's Journal with his proof: Elena Monica, a former AIDS patient who acquired AIDS from drug usage, who offers laboratory results to prove she is now a healthy HIV positive person and Dr. Christopher Calapai who says he has successfully treated similar cases.

On the program, Dr. Null offers former tennis pro Arthur Ashe -- now suffering from full-blown AIDS -- a treatment protocol that Dr. Null says would render him HIV positive, but without AIDS within six months. Dr. Null also makes a public appeal to Magic Johnson to accept the same treatment protocol that he says would render Johnson seronegative within six months -- and guarantee his return to professional basketball.

Educational opportunities for disabled to be discussed

What educational and career opportunities are available to learning disabled students and young adults? Saturday, Jan. 16, this question will be addressed at a seminar entitled "Where Do We Go From Here?" being sponsored by Marburn Academy and The Learning Disabilities Association of Central Ohio.

People with learning disabilities have problems with one or more of the basic academic subjects such as reading, writing, mathematics and spelling. They often have poor organization and time management skills. Sometimes they are unable to follow oral or written instructions and cannot remember what is taught from day-to-day, hour-to-hour. With early diagnosis, an appropriate educational program, support from parents or the primary caretaker, and a structured daily learning environment, individuals with learning disabilities can be successful.

This seminar will allow parents and professionals to learn about the wide spectrum of options that are now available to the learning disabled, both locally and regionally, from colleges to camps, from schools to jobs.

Key presenters during the morning sessions will be Jim Rein and Gordon Felt from New York Institute of Technology. Mr. Rein's topic will be "Post-secondary Options for the Learning Disabled" and Mr. Felt will speak on "Beyond the Classroom."

A few other topics to be discussed include "How to Evaluate your Child"; "Post-Graduate High School Programs"; "College Degree Programs for the Learning Disabled"; "Independent Living"; and "Developing Independence At Home." The seminar is designed to help parents make the right choice in deciding the next step for a learning disabled child or young adult.

Also participating in the seminar are Stuart Oremus, director of Admissions and Learning Disability Student Coordinator at Denison University; Arlene Altman, an independent educational consultant; Anne Schlichter, private tutor; Nancy James, parent advocate; and Earl Oremus, headmaster of Marburn Academy. In addition, roundtable conversations for all the topics plus college admissions and degree programs, and day and boarding schools throughout the U.S. will be held in the afternoon.

The seminar is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 16. It is open to the public and a suggested donation of $5 per family may be paid at the door. For reservations or questions, contact Roberta Schumieffel at 433-0822.

John Kennedy: Willing to make tough decisions

By LARRY JAMES
Call and Post Contributing Columnist

We hear so little about the positives of the human experience. Maybe it is old fashion and not in vogue. Regardless, the quality of life bears a direct correlation to the positive experience we share with others.

It was 12 years ago that John P. Kennedy and I first met. We both had been assigned the same office in our law firm. We smiled and conceded to each other in silence that the law firm was rich in old line tradition. We wondered out loud how a white working class, Irish Catholic from New Jersey and a poor Black Baptist from the Midwest would fair in this old line firm.

We both made partner in 1986 and realized there was hope for us. We had not expected to find that we had so much in common. I recall meeting John's father in the New York airport for the first time in 1987. This tall Irish looking fellow gave me a firm handshake and the type of hug that interrupted your breathing. John's mother, Barb, and his sister, Kathy, greeted me as if they were welcoming me into the family.

A few years later I got to know John's two brothers, Mike and Charlie. John had made arrangement for the complete family to move to Columbus. It was at that point that I began to appreciate the true character of my friend. There were very few sacrifices that John did not make for his family.

It was our differences as well as our similarities that strengthened our friendship. This was most notable during my tenure as Safety Director. John served as chairman of the Safety Committee for the Columbus City Council. It was his committee that had the oversight for the entire safety division. John, a democrat, was also up for reelection. I was a Republican and a Republican administration. There was a hotly contested Mayor's race between a Black democrat and a white republican, as well as several hotly contested council races. Safety was the big issue in all races. The worst of all worlds for our friendship.

Over dinner we laughed at our dilemma. I recall John saying that, "The easiest thing for us to do is to take advantage of this opportunity." He asked, "How often in politics do you have best friends in our positions with the window of opportunity to do the right thing to the best of one's ability." His resolution was to make the tough decisions and move forward.

The characteristic that impressed me the most about John Kennedy was his ability to make the tough decisions and move on. That characteristic also added to his comfort level to move in all circles throughout the community. No matter the audience, John made himself available and remained himself.

In today's world, we seldom have the opportunity to truly share in a world of difference. Many talk on the subject but few live it. Today, it is not unusual to find John frequently the only white in all Black company. What's so unique, is that this has become a habit with him. More importantly, it has become a comfortable habit.

DCSC shakeup result of exposure, informant says

By PAUL G. ANDERSON
Call And Post Business Editor

An unidentified source at the Defense Construction Supply Center (DCSC) telephoned this reporter recently to indicate that a major shakeup has taken place at DCSC. This shakeup is the result of media coverage of charges of racial discrimination against minority vendors by administrators at the center, the source indicated.

According to our source, who also telephoned us back in the summer to inform us of the problem, the Center's Commanding General ordered an investigation into the charges reported in the July 9 issue of The Call and Post. Those same charges had been reported by a local television station. An investigation was also ordered into who on the base was responsible for leaking the story to the media, according to the source.

In the July article, we reported the following problems: 1) jobs were being rebid even after original bids had been accepted by DCSC; 2) the timeframe for the work to be completed that had been contracted for being adjusted making it difficult to finish jobs; 3) paperwork delays holding up jobs; 4) harassment of minority company employees by DCSC staff; 5) damage to business property on the base; 6) DCSC staff "losing" invoices, causing delays in payments; 7) DCSC staff using the slowest method of payment; 8) DCSC staffers creating a general environment of hostility to minority business vendors.

In our earlier interviews with DCSC staffers, we learned that the base had never met its goal of a Congressionally-mandated five percent set-aside for minority business vendors. The closest the base had come in meeting their goals was between 2.50-3.00% of the goal, according to these officials.

Most of the minority vendors who do work with DCSC are part of the 8(a) program sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA). SBA enters into prime contracts with departments and agencies of the U.S. government to provide goods and services. It then subcontracts the performance on those contracts to 8(a) approved firms.

Reduced defense spending has cut into the opportunities for all vendors at the base; however, Congress has not revised its allocation for minority businesses. According to our source, U.S. Congressman John Kasich (R.-Ohio) has been directly involved in the problems reported at the base relating to the charges on which we reported.

Several administrators have been removed and "re-deployed" for their involvement in the obstruction of business opportunities for minority businesses as well as for attempting to cover-up their actions, according to the source. As a further result of the investigation, one of the minority vendors who complained about the problems is in line to get several contracts with DCSC, contracts for which he bid and which he won on the basis of competitive bidding anyway, according to the source.

In the August 17, 1992 issue of JET MAGAZINE, the SBA was charged by U.S. Representative John Conyers (D.-Mich.) and Joshua Smith, CEO of Maxima, Inc. as being ineffective and evidencing a "hostility toward fostering minority business development." In that article, Conyers is reported as having accused the SBA of repeated failure to meet minority business goals.

The business of religion -- black-style?

In the Columbus, Ohio black community--I dare say, in many cities, USA--the institution that grosses a lion's share of the weekly revenue that stays in the black community is undoubtedly the black church. I believe the statistics will bear me out on that point. If, as some economists suggest, only ten percent of the spendable dollars that come into the black community "stays" in our community, I would argue that the largest part of those dollars are spent (invested?) with our churches.

Black churches provide a "culture-specific" service that tends to be unique for its patrons (parishioners) spiritual lives in a way similar to that of other black businesses to which the community is decidedly loyal--black hair stylists, black funeral directors, a few black restaurants, and clothing retailers come to mind.

All you need to do is look at who holds the largest chunks of real estate in the black community and you get a sense of the magnitude of the business posture of black churches in our community. The temples in which we worship are often inspirational just by their construction.

And yes, looking at the construction alone of the buildings in which we worship is important for one key reason. If you start with the bricks and mortar, you can get to the real reason these edifices are built the way they are: you get a sense of the business of impressions our churches must make to keep us interested and to keep the money flowing. The structure itself is a part of the business posture. Chapels are not senior high school classrooms; they are not gymnasiums. They are places in which to worship Something--Someone--larger than us all.

It is an architectural fact that the most praiseworthy edifices are built large and with lots of interior room for the exact same reason as are halls of justice. The structure is supposed to engulf you and make you feel small. Similarly, the marble pillars at the entrance of major financial institutions are built that way to present the sense of stability to the users of the services of those institutions. Confidence keeps the money flowing there, too.

We look down our noses at "store-front" establishments of any kind; "store front" establishments make it a point to get into facilities that are not "rinky-dinky". You want something impressive because such structures make you feel that certain "sense of place" when you are inside one of them. And that comfort helps with fund-raising and all sorts of other things. Architectural facts these are; maybe our secular institutions can learn from them.

Anyway, I had an interesting discussion with a gentleman from Liberia back in the summer of last year about the role different religions and the structures associated with them have served in their communities since recorded history. It seems, said Joma Flemister, that religions of the world have helped provide the moral justification for the entrepreneurial, and even the imperial, ambitions of the people from whom they sprang.

It seems, says Flemister, that that role of "business springboard", however, has not been embraced by people supporting black churches in the same way as it has with most of the other major religions of the world.

Since black Christian churches have to struggle to make the message of "white Christianity" meaningful in the day-to-day lives of black people, said Flemister, why not get one thing right--namely, make sure black congregations at least support each other in the businesses parishioners own and run. Make sure, said Flemister, that the money parishioners earn is pooled in some fashion for the mutual benefit of the members of each congregation.

Who knows, said Flemister, if congregations pulled together, maybe the black business community itself could become stronger just by virtue of the affinity congregation members feel toward one another and the businesses that even spring from that unity. And if congregations did it internally, maybe "that charity that began at home" could spread abroad.

Of course, I wouldn't be writing this if I did not share some of Flemister's views on the subject. I think he's right both on the analytical as well as the moral grounds on which his arguments are based. Since much of the spiritual work that has to be done in our lives must be completed by each of us as our own experiences dictate, it makes sense for us to empower others who share our view of the world.

Hysteria, emotionalism and fear are food for mobs; the love of community as manifested by cooperation in business and other joint ventures goes beyond either. Bricks, mortar, and other superficialities aside, our churches can play a key role in this development. Please ask your minister if any of this makes sense.

Drawing up a will is good preparation for life

From The Better Business Bureau

Most people don't like to think about drawing up a will. Many put it off until it is too late, often with tragic results for their loved ones. But if you die intestate (without a will), state law decides who gets your property, and that decision may be contrary to your wishes.

Besides stating who will receive your property upon your death, a will also names a personal representative, or executor. This person is responsible for paying the bills, such as creditors and funeral expenses, and making sure that the property gets to the right people. And in a will, you can name a guardian for any minor children.

Many people mistakenly believe that having a will helps to avoid probate. In the probate process, overseen by the local probate court, property is inventoried and accounted for, debts and taxes are paid, and the remainder of the estate is passed along to the new owners and titled in their names. But even if you have a will, it is very likely that some of your assets and property will be subject to probate.

Probate is not necessary if you die owning only non-probate property, such as property jointly owned with the right of survivorship. This passes by law to the surviving co-owner, for example, a home owned by a married couple. Non-probate property also may include life insurance and pension benefits that are paid to others, and property owned in trust, such as a living trust. Non-probate property passes to survivors outside the probate process and outside the terms of a will.

To locate a reputable lawyer to help you draw up a will, the Better Business Bureau recommends asking friends, relatives or co-workers for recommendations. Ask the lawyer about his or her credentials and areas of expertise; (SEE DRAWING/PAGE 2C)

Workers' comp bureau improves service in 1992

According to sources at the Ohio Bureau of Workers' Compensation (BWC), injured workers' claims were processed quicker and more efficiently, service to employers improved, fraud investigations have been stepped up and cost-containment efforts were beginning to show results, due to changes implemented in 1992.

As a result of reforms the amount of money being paid out for claims decreased. In 1992, BWC saved employers about $180 million in annual premium increases that would have been necessary without improvements in the following areas:

CLAIMS ASSIGNMENT--Implemented in all 18 BWC service offices statewide by October, this new process gives injured workers a specific person to contact at BWC. Through claims assignment, claims representatives are assigned to handle claims from start to finish. In the past, claims examiners often never saw the same claim twice, leaving room for inefficiency and little accountability.

Claims assignment makes claims representatives responsible for gathering claims information quickly, speeding benefit payments to injured workers. Claims representatives now attempt to contact the injured worker, employer and physician of record within 24 hours of receipt of a claim. Claims representatives have also been trained to identify injured workers who need rehabilitation early on in the claims process, improving chances of successful rehabilitation and return to work. In the past, injured workers were not referred to rehabilitation for months after their injuries.

90-DAY EXAM PROGRAM--Also called the Statewide Disability Evaluation System (SDES), this program was launched in all but two BWC service offices in 1992. Under the program, injured workers are given a 90-day exam (SEE WORKERS/PAGE 2C)

Society Bank presents minority business awards

The Society Bank public sector Minority Business Advocate Award for 1992 was recently presented to U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) Columbus District for leadership in helping minority businesses. In the past three years SBA's Columbus District has approved loans to known minority-owned businesses totalling more than $17 million.

The private sector Minority Business Advocate Award was presented to James R. Willis, president of Willis Distributing. Willis began Willis Distributing in 1967 and now employs 60 people, mostly African Americans. In 1992, Willis and his brother were finalists for the Small Businessperson of the Year Award. Willis now serves on Society Bank's Advisory Board and regularly helps other minority business owners start or expand their businesses.

For the first time, Society also presented the President's Award. The award for 1992 went to Curtis J. Moody, president and CEO of Moody/Nolan Ltd., Inc., honoring him for actively promoting a multi-cultural business climate in central Ohio. He has taken a leadership role in minority business development at the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce and fosters multi-cultural diversity through his participation on a number of local boards, including Society's Advisory Board.

The reception honoring the awardees was held during the final quarter of 1992. "Society is very grateful to our customers, not only for their business, but also for the opportunities they've given us to help the community," said Robert G. Jones, district president of the bank. "This reception is our way of saying 'thank you'." Jones added.

Council president Lazarus identifies key money issues

PART I of interview with City Council President Lazarus
By PAUL G. ANDERSON
Call and Post Business Editor

CP: What I'd like to ask you first is if you could identify what you would consider to be three of the key financial priorities for the city of Columbus from where you sit as president of city council.

LAZARUS: I think, without any question, the greatest financial priority at this point is to complete the transfer of the trash burning power plant because the budget that we will be adopting in a couple of weeks is really based upon the transfer occurring. If it doesn't happen, then the financial consequences and the financial adjustments that will need to be made will be significant. So that's first and foremost what we need to do.

CP: Why is it so significant?

LAZARUS: Because of the level of subsidy that it requires from the city at this point and the idea is to transfer resources to the Solid Waste Authority, which is a regional operation, so that rather than just the taxpayers of the city of Columbus bearing financial responsibility for the cost of what really is a regional resource, that it will be shared in a more equitable fashion, where we will be paying a more appropriate share. That frees up, then, money to be used for other purposes. As I said, it is contemplated in the budget to be acted upon. So if that doesn't happen as planned, then within the first quarter, there will need to be a major readjustment in this year's budget.

CP: Do you see any problem here?

LAZARUS: There is no indication that there is any opposition. It simply is a reasonably complex transfer. And I remember when we were looking at transferring Port Columbus to the Airport Authority, working through all the legal documents, and once you put more than one attorney in a room, it takes a lot more than anyone expected.

CP: So when is that likely to be done?

LAZARUS: It has been contemplated that it would be completed by the end of the first quarter. So that would be first and foremost. I think the second issue for this year would be whether we have the ability to try and sustain four police classes. I spoke with [Police] Chief [James] Jackson the other day at the graduation ceremony and they had just completed a review of their current staffing needs--not expanded staffing--in the Department and it was dramatic. So I am certainly hopeful that we will be able to put together the financial plan that will make it possible for us to implement that proposal. But that, to me, is the second greatest financial issue that we have to address.

CP: You said it was dramatic. What do you mean?

LAZARUS: This is an really on-going staffing situation. It's not just something that occurred within 1992. For some time now, almost every section within the

Division of Police has been short-staffed, whether it's the uniformed staff or the support staff. So it's not very helpful to have four police classes if you don't also have the clerical support staff that will enable them to spend their time doing police work as opposed to clerical work. If you don't have sufficient resources down at the county court house to be able to prosecute cases that we bring. So that whole issue is much more complicated than can we pay for four police classes this one year. And that's what we are going to be working on this year.

CP: That's number two. Number three?

Don't let the cost of having a will drawn up scare you: it's relatively inexpensive. injured workers who have received temporary total disability benefits for 90 consecutive days are examined by a BWC-certified medical provider.

Temporary total disability, usually the first form of compensation awarded after a workplace injury, is paid to injured workers with a temporary disability that prevents them from returning to their job at the time of injury. The SDS program benefits injured workers by ensuring appropriate treatment and assessing rehabilitation potential. The program benefits employers by monitoring the status of injured workers for appropriateness of continued benefits.

FRAUD INVESTIGATIONS--The BWC Fraud Investigations Unit stepped up its activities in 1992 and identified more than $2.8 million in fraudulent activity. The Fraud Investigations Unit detects, prosecutes and deters fraud against BWC. The unit has a nationwide, toll-free hotline to report fraud. The hotline number is 1-800-837-1554.

PARTNERS FOR EXCELLENCE--Launched as a prototype in BWC's Northwest Region in October 1992, this program pairs BWC experts with employers to create individualized action plans aimed at better managing workers' compensation programs and cutting employers' costs in the short and long term.

Computer systems/staffing and training--To support all of the above efforts at BWC, a new computer system and additional staff and training are necessary. In 1992, BWC enhanced its current computer system while planning for a new system to be operational in 1993. To reverse the traditional understaffing at BWC, 346 employees were hired in 1992. Training current staff in new claims-processing techniques and other skills has also been a priority. During the past year, 2,462 employees attended 168 training classes.

And that's one where the city doesn't have nearly as direct a financial goal as we do in the other two items that I've discussed. But when you look at our community, I think it's one of the greatest needs that we have. And what we need to do is to continue to work with the groups that are already in existence, hopefully, with a more receptive national administration to try and leverage as many dollars as we can.

Huntington Bank receives I Know I Can volunteer award

One of the I KNOW I CAN's leading providers of corporate volunteers, The Huntington National Bank, was part of a national recognition in Washington, D.C. in late fall last year. The award, given by the National Association of Partners in Education (NAPE), recognizes I KNOW I CAN volunteer efforts that are making a difference.

Ricardo Wright, assistant vice president and community reinvestment officer for The Huntington was present in Washington, D.C. to accept the award on behalf of I KNOW I CAN and The Huntington. "It was an honor to accept the national award as The Huntington believes strongly in the individual and community benefits of the I KNOW I CAN program," Wright explains. "This is just one of the important efforts The Huntington is making in our community to enhance the higher educational opportunities for Columbus city school students."

In 1991-1992 as part of I KNOW I CAN's corps of over 200 volunteers, The Huntington helped the program access more than $10.4 million in federal, state, and institutional financial aid to make college a reality for Columbus students.

Like those from The Huntington, all I KNOW I CAN volunteers receive technical training to become either Evening Advisors, who offer one-on-one financial aid advising during I KNOW I CAN's January and February nighttime workshops, or Daytime Advisors, who work with students on a weekly basis in their high schools throughout the year.

The Huntington's commitment to I KNOW I CAN goes beyond volunteer hours, however. The Huntington also provides monetary support. Corporate funding from The Huntington and donors like it have allowed I KNOW I CAN to award $776,542 in last dollar grants this year to the 928 qualified students who still had unmet financial need.

Lavish surprise party for Dr. Leak

Once upon a time, on the first day of the year 1953, a baby was born in the county of Wake, in the city of Raleigh in the state of North Carolina. The baby's name is William David Leak. Down the road a piece, another baby was born as the new year of 1951 rolled in. This baby was born in the county of Edgecomb, in the city of Tarboro, in the state of North Carolina. This baby was given the name of Melanie (Boyd). Both of these little babies were the first ones born in their respective counties two years apart. As sugar plums danced in their heads and they grew from newborns to infants to toddlers to teenagers, little did they know that their paths would cross. But, as their destinies unfolded, this male and female Capricorn pair would indeed meet.

Their meeting was unusual and did not occur until Melanie was a junior in high school in Raleigh where her family had moved when she was in the ninth grade. By that time, David was a student at North Carolina State (NC) University majoring in Zoology. As was customary during the Summer, David, like many other college students, was working. His job was at the Meadow Brook Country Club in Raleigh. Melanie and her sister were driving around town in the Mercedes her family had for the "kids" and came upon David in the Club's swimming pool frolicking on a water raft. Now, not that Melanie was spoiled or anything like that, but she was use to getting what she wanted and she immediately decided that she wanted the raft that David had.

So, once in the pool, she decided to get it. David responded resoundingly in the negative and refused to give up the water toy. Melanie persisted and persisted and persisted. The more she pursued her goal, the further away it came to being fulfilled. David kept the raft and decided that he didn't like the Boyd sisters. After the water raft incident they and especially Melanie, didn't like him. But, Fate reared its reliable head and pretty soon David called Melanie on the phone. Through these calls a friendship began to blossom and continued in full bloom when they began to date. As a matter of fact, it had bloomed to the engagement stage before Melanie went to college at NC State and A & T State Universities where she received two undergraduate degrees in food science.

On a beautiful sunny day, June 21, 1975 to be exact, in their beloved Raleigh, David Leak took Melanie Boyd as his lawfully wedded wife to have and to hold from that day forward.

After David completed his undergraduate studies at NC State, he entered the Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest, NC as a Board of Governor's Scholar. With the basics of medicine under his stethoscope, he began an internship at The Ohio State University College of Medicine in anesthesia. Onward he went with his training to begin fellowship in anesthesia at the University of Pennsylvania with further study occurring in pain management at the University of Cincinnati.

Melanie and David are now the proud, proud parents of four children, Dawn who is 13 years old, Meghan, 12, Mia, 10 and finally a male child to carry on the Leak name, William David, II, a hearty two and a half year old fell. Melanie had a lot to keep her busy, busy, busy during these years, but you know what she did, don't you? With all of the zeal and determination that she has demonstrated since a young child, she entered The Ohio State University College of Dentistry and completed her dental studies while balancing homemaking, child rearing and being wife to her Capricorn other half.

Now, all of the above lead to Near Year's Eve 1992 as the clock struck 12 to bring in the new year, the birthdays of both of the Leaks. Remember how I've said that Melanie can become extreme focussed? Well, she did just that once again. According to Mrs. Jamie Smith-encas (Ann), it was one year and two months ago that Melanie began to plan a surprise party for David's 40th birthday. You know, the over the hill one. I know that she told me about it 11 months ago. It was a surprise to all of those who knew about it so long ago that not one single soul told David anything about it. The huge black and gold invitations were beautiful in their black envelopes with RSVP card and stamped return envelopes.

Friends were so silent about it that they told him fibs on the day of the party such as that told by Deep Mehta, a friend and colleague of David's. He told him that he wouldn't be around that day because he

YWCA honors 12 Women of Achievement

Five Blacks are among honorees

By RAYMOND L. SMITH
Call and Post Staff Writer

A mother who responded to her son's murder by helping others, another who saves lives by promoting disease prevention and the first African American woman mayor were among the dozen women recently honored as central Ohio 1993 YWCA Women of Achievement.

The eight year old YWCA Women of Achievement program recognizes the work of women who through their lives and professions work to benefit the overall community and to eliminate racism wherever it exists, said Carole Williams, publisher of Business First newspaper. Williams is a 1989 winner of the award.

"We were especially pleased with the number and the variety of people that were nominated this year," said Williams. More than 200 people were nominated. An eight person panel determined the winners.

The honorees will formally be given their awards during a March 11 luncheon at the new Columbus Convention Center. Proceeds from the luncheon benefit the Central Ohio YWCA program and services.

The honorees are:

- * Anna Bishop, a retired educator, author, composer, who, through the Greater Columbus Arts Council and Ohio Arts Council, shares African-American history, art, poetry and pride to school children.

- * Cheryl A. Boyce, executive director of the Ohio Commission on Minority Health, whose leadership has increased relevant, need-based, culturally sensitive service by health agencies and organizations throughout Ohio and the nation;

- * Sharon Boyer, who, after the murder of her son in 1990, is an active volunteer in organizations designed to ease the pain of families of murder victims and committees working to toughen sentencing laws throughout the state;

- * Bunny C. Clarke Ph.D., OSU professor whose research in nuclear physics has been recognized both nationally and internationally;

- * Ellen W. Craig-Jones, a senior-aged community activist and advocate for children who, as mayor of Urbancrest, was the first African-American female mayor in a U.S. municipality.

- * Mary Ellen Fairfield, attorney with Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease and the first and only woman elected to be a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers whose volunteer efforts helped revamp the social services and fiscal stability of the YWCA in the late 1970s and early 1980s;

- * Claire Sawaya Hazucha, executive director of the Convention Facilities Authority who was responsible for the physical development and financing of the $94 million Greater Columbus Convention Center, slated to open in March;

- * Elizabeth B. Mayo, attorney with Porter, Wright, Morris and Arthur and first woman elected directing partner at her firm whose community leadership has been felt by many arts, health and human service organizations;

- * Anna S. Pruitt, Ed.D., OSU professor and director of the Center for Teaching Excellence who has dedicated her career to ensuring access to quality education for all;

- * Mary Ellen Withrow, state treasurer and long-time political leader whose efforts to strengthen Ohio's financial management have earned her recognition locally, nationally and internationally;

- * Beatrice E. Wolper, attorney with Emens, Keger, Brown, Hill and Ritter, who has spearheaded numerous programs which assist women and minority professionals; and,

- * Elizabeth Gee, Ed.D., former OSU research associate and adjunct professor whose life and deeds had a great impact on central Ohio, has been awarded a special posthumous award. Gee's award is the first posthumous award ever given by the organization.

"Any recognition I received is simply a reflection of the wonderful work of the many people and organizations around Ohio working to improve and increase the access of health care to people that have traditionally been denied it," said Boyce, director of the nation's first minority health commission. There are now 27 state-funded minority health commissions in the U.S.

The Ohio Commission of Minority Health, which began in 1986, provides funding to programs and agencies that provide community-based programs that emphasize preventive health measures and testing. The commission operates on

Boyce became interested in preventive medicine after growing up watching relatives suffer and die from preventable diseases. "The causes of disease I watched my father slowly die from are still rampant in communities throughout the nation," said Boyce. "The tragedy is that, in many cases, they are unnecessary and avoidable."

"We have come a long way in addressing some of these health concerns; but we have such a long way to go," she continued.

Boyer is a volunteer member on Ohio's Criminal Sentencing Commission, on Lt. Gov. Mike DeWine's Advisory Committee on Stricter Parole Board Guidelines, on State Rep. Ray Miller's Violence Reduction Commission and a member of the Parents of Murdered Children. She became active in victim's rights and the criminal justice system (SEE YMCA/PAGE 2B)

Seven Blacks included in 82nd police class

was picking up various computer items. He was picking up things all right, but they were out-of-townners who were coming for the party. Fitting was a big part of the planning because Melanie told David that he just had to go to this New Year's Eve bash because one of her club's was hosting it and she was the chairperson.

Added to that fib, Oscar Watson told him that he had to be there because Oscar was in charge of the program and wanted David to say a few words. Because Oscar and David are such good friends, David agreed, but truly did not want to go to anyone's party!

So, David goes home after a long day of surgery and Melanie insists that he get dressed in his tux. He was just a little passive-aggressive in his attitude because he grabbed a regular white shirt to wear instead of his tux shirt. He used Melanie's diamond cuff links instead of his own. By this time,

Melanie, resplendent in her black velvet gown and diamond jewelry, just wanted to get him to the Champions Gold and Country Club where their guests were already enjoying cocktails. Finally, they got there.

Glenna Watson, who had been a part of the planning all along, casually met them at the door and they walked down the corridor. As they approached the room where the festivities were being held, David said to himself that the party must be mighty dull because he couldn't hear any laughter or chatter. Glenna didn't help one bit because all the way down the hall she was complaining about the committee selecting the wrong color balloons for the huge thick arch of balloons complete with flickering lights through which they entered. All of a sudden, the air was crisp with shouts of "Surprise" and "Happy Birthday." David was STUNNED and please believe me, I mean STUNNED - and he still is. As black balloons floated from the ceiling, he was OUTDONE!

When he settled down, just a bit, he was able to see pictures of himself from infancy to the present posted along a wall. He saw a 3 x 6 foot decorated birthday cake that resembled a tombstone and had to sit on a table by itself. He also saw round tables draped in black satin tablecloths with black napkins and black taffeta chair covers. He saw centerpieces on each table bursting forth with white Spring flowers, tulips, hyacinths, snapdragons, etc. with gold ivy intertwined. He saw, stuck in each centerpiece, a tombstone that commemorated his over-the-hill status. David saw and heard the Bruce Tyler Trio holding forth with music for dancing all evening by the formally attired guests.

Although he saw the food that was placed before him and his guests which was a choice between Chicken Cordon Bleu and Prime Sirloin with appropriate side dishes, he at very little. He was too filled up with joy, humility and thanks for the many friends who thought enough of him to be a part of this very special surprise evening. As he sat at the table, he noticed all of the Ficus trees with their white lights and numerous balloon bouquets that graced the room. He greeted the guests and thanked them from the bottom of his heart. He saw his lovely wife and glowed with appreciation. He saw a second balloon drop at midnight with gold and white ones bringing in the new year as guests toasted with champagne. He felt like a King. His Melanie had outdone herself.

Invited guests were Dr/M Kenneth Allen (Lillian), Councilman/M Michael Coleman (Frankie), M/M Reginald Davis (Shellee), Dr/M Paul Fletcher (Ethel), Sen/M Ben Espy (Kathy), Harry Liebowitz, Harry Franklin, M/M Ralph Frazier (Jeannine), Dr/M Randall Henderson (Cynthia), Dr/M William Hicks (Jessica), M/M James Jackson (Linda), Dr/M Carl Jeffries (Anita), Dr/M Alfred Jefferson (Gloria), Dr/M James Lipscomb (Ruby) and M/M David Longmire.

twice. First by the crime, and then, by the criminal justice system. I had to do something."

To address her own feelings, Boyer became an active member of Parents of Murdered Children, a nationwide organization designed to help relatives of murder victims to grieve and to realize they are not alone. She later became active in the statewide committees and commissions addressing sentencing and parole.

"I don't want to take away the rights of those who are accused of committing crimes, but there needs to be a balance of rights given to the victims of violence," said Boyer. "Just as the criminal justice system provides information about trial, sentencing, parole board and other dates to those accused and convicted of crimes, it should provide the same information to victims or their families."

Boyer is working on the various commissions and committees to give victims and/or surviving family members should have more opportunity to give their views during sentencing procedures and during parole board hearings.

"My main goal is to reduce the number of young people getting hurt and killed," said Boyer. "The important thing is to give them a chance to live."

Bishop, 76, describes herself as an "old woman" who has been working in the Columbus community since she was 16.

"People tell me that I've done a lot, but I just feel I've lived a full life. I've done some things that were worthwhile to the community and some things that were just common place."

"I see myself as an educator," Bishop continued. "I will continue to spread whatever knowledge I have until I no longer can do it."

Proper nutrition combats Tea and Toast Syndrome

By CRIS GILLESPIE

Call and Post Contributing Writer

A healthy diet consists of more than tea and toast. Unfortunately, many older adults substitute this snack for a well-balanced meal. With the combination of poor nutrition and colder weather, older adults may find it challenging to stay healthy and remain active.

In fact, a major health, nutrition and aging group has estimated that half a million to a million people over age 65 are malnourished, or suffer from the "tea and toast syndrome." Older adults who don't want to cook and exist on light snacks, such as tea and toast, are most likely to feel the effects of poor nutrition.

Other common barriers to nutrition include: skipping meals, which makes it hard to get all the needed nutrients; tooth loss/mouth pain; and taking multiple medicines. For instance, side effects such as nausea, drowsiness and increased or decrease appetite, can be intensified with each additional medicine taken. Large doses of vitamins and minerals can also be harmful.

Fortunately, easy solutions based on the concept of "wellness" do exist. "Wellness" factors that lead to a healthy consist of 25 percent environment, 25 percent hereditary and 50 percent lifestyle.

By following the U.S. Department of Agriculture's "Food Guide Pyramid," which has been expanded from four to six basic food groups, older adults can directly influence the "lifestyle" half of the "wellness" factor.

The pyramid consists of "six-11 servings of the bread, cereal, rice and pasta food group" at the base, "three-five servings of the vegetable group" at the second level, followed by "two-three servings of milk, yogurt and cheese" and "two-three servings of meat, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs and nuts group." The top of the pyramid suggests "fats, oils and sweets" should be used only sparingly.

The pyramid demonstrates how older adults who typically have little variety in their diet face a greater risk of health problems. In fact, the National Screening Initiative estimates that only 13 percent of adults eat the minimum daily recommended of fruits and vegetables.

As a result, rather than totally eliminating certain food groups, people should eat small portions of everything. For example, a recommended portion of meat would be about the size of a deck of cards. In addition, older adults who tend to only eat two meals a day should include at least three of the food groups in the pyramid for a snack to be considered healthy.

Considering the inclement weather, it is a good idea to store easy-to-prepare staples, such as cereals, grains, and starches. Potatoes are an excellent source of complex carbohydrates and potassium to have on hand can be prepared easily in a microwave. These food items are convenient and promote good eating habits. Small portions of meat, like four ounce boneless chicken breasts, can be stored in a freezer and then thawed as needed.

Besides nutrition, exercise can play important part in an older adult's "wellness" efforts. Actually, exercise even helps stimulates the appetite. Whatever exercise is chosen, it should be fun. Few people stick to unpleasant routines. Reality suggests that enjoyable activities are more likely to become contributors towards a healthy lifestyle.

Walking outdoors, if the weather permits, or inside malls or a local recreation center is a possibility

Dancing or fitness classes are popular as well. The most important thing to remember is to remain physically active if at all possible. For example, those whose lower body is physically challenged, may want to still participate in upper body exercises. Many retirement communities also feature exercise rooms.

Because many people eat less as they get older, it's important to eat foods high in nutrition. This will not only provide fuel for exercise, but power them down the road towards "wellness."

STUDENTS FROM FT. HAYES CAREER CENTER'S MEDICAL AND HEALTH-RELATED CLASSES participate in CMACAO Head Start Program's FIP Health and Fire Safety Seminar held at The Ohio State University's Black Studies Extension Center.

Health and Fire Safety seminar sponsored by CMACAO Head Start FIP

"FIP's goal with the fire, home safety and health seminar," said Jill Hairston, "is to provide Head State Program parents with tools that will help keep their families safe."

The second Health and Fire Safety Seminar sponsored by the Columbus Metropolitan Area Community Action Organization (CMACAO) Head Start Program's Families In Partnership (FIP) Project was held prior to the Christmas holidays at The Ohio State University's Black Studies Extension Center.

"The reason for scheduling the session near the holidays was," according to Hairston, "due to live Christmas trees in homes where there may be faulty wiring which overloads the system and the dangers associated with trees mounted in unstable stands." "The Christmas season," she concludes, "is always a prime-time for fires."

Even reason the main thrust was on safety during the holidays, the Health and Fire Safety Seminar's primary focus was on how to prevent in-home fires and accidents home year-round.

Health and Fire Safety Seminar facilitators were Wesley H.

Fullen enrolled in CMACAO's Head Start Program and health and medical oriented class students from available for members of the general public.

To re-inforce the training, Smoke Alarms, Fire Extinguishers and First Aid Kits were distributed to participants.

With funding for FIP made available through The Ohio Commission on Minority Health, The CMACAO Head State Program FIP Project's main goal is to address priority prevention health concerns which includes cancer, cardiovascular diseases (Stroke and hypertension, diabetes mellitus, alcohol and drug dependency, suicide/homicide and infant mortality.

FIP attempts to prevent and control these health risks through early diagnosis, encouraging behavioral changes, implementing safety measures, early effective treatment and participation in a variety of health and safety-related activities for Head Start Program children and their families.

A volunteer goes "home"

BY JORDANA Y. SHAKOOR
Call and Post Staff Writer

Cassius M. Bray Jr. liked to help people. He liked to travel, and he liked to fish. On January 4, at Park Medical Center, he died suddenly of a heart attack. He was 66 years old.

CASSIUS M. BRAY JR. A friend to young and old, enjoyed spending time helping others, as seen in this photo, courtesy of the Children's Hospital Volunteer Program.

Bray was born on June 17, in the year of 1926, in the small town of Findlay, Ohio to Cassius Martin Bray Sr. and Mildred Lee Bray.

He studied at The Ohio State University, and served in the United States Army, retiring after an extensive military career.

Although Bray was a private man, never big on social events, he gave his life to others in acts of charity, with more than twenty years that he could. Children's Hospital is where he volunteered most often.

Betty Diaz-Holmes, secretary of volunteer services, says Bray worked wherever he was needed. He began his volunteer work at Children's Hospital in November of 1977 receiving top awards each year for outstanding service.

"Mr. Bray was just a great person. Wherever we needed him, he would gladly work," said Holmes.

Holmes says, Bray volunteered in the physical therapy department, and the Blood Bank. He volunteered as a library assistant and as a receptionist. He delivered patient's mail. He volunteered as an orderly, or read to patients. He also spent many hours talking, and comforting sick children in an effort to help them to cope better with their illness and their hospital stay.

However, Bray's most important volunteer position was as a tour guide to area schools wanting to visit Children's Hospital to see first hand how a hospital is run.

"When the schools called, they would insist on having Mr. Bray as their guide," said Holmes. "He loved children. I believe that's why he came to us in the first place. We're really in shock around here."

One school which received the benefits of Bray's charitable nature was Eastgate Elementary. Bray would often visit the school. Again helping out wherever he was needed.

"Mr. Bray was a good man," said Luella Tapo, at Saint Philip Evangelical Lutheran Church, during memorial services. She spoke of one occasion when it had snowed. A day when Bray had not only shoveled the sidewalks in front of the school, but had cleaned snow off teacher's cars.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL VOLUNTEER-Cassius M. Bray Jr. receiving an award on November 19, 1991 from Jan Ray of Marketing. The event was sponsored by the Marketing Department's Media Room to thank those who had volunteered their time and expertise in representing the hospital to the community.

"When the teachers got to their cars they found them already cleaned off," said Tapo. "Mr. Bray was always doing things to help others."

Corporate Director of Children's Hospital, Jim Jackson, says that Bray was not just a dedicated volunteer to him. He was a friend and a fishing buddy.

"Cassius was really a neat guy," Jackson said. "Once a year we would go up to Michigan and fish for walleye in Lake Erie. We also fished in the Hoover Dam. I'm really going to miss him."

As a world traveler, Jackson said that Bray would send post cards back to everyone he knew.

"Cassius talked to everybody. He was well liked and he didn't forget us when he went traveling," Jackson said.

Bray while traveling did not forget the ones he loved and cared about. He did not forget his family, and his friends. He did not forget all children sick and well, nor all school teachers in schools. Eastgate Elementary in particular. Bray did not forget patients and friends in hospitals. Children's Hospital in particular, where he spent all those years helping "wherever" he could.

Cassius M. Bray Jr. did not forget, nor will he be forgotten.

Researchers look for ways to reverse aging

Geriatrics researchers studying the behavior of cells have found that the human aging process may be reversible.

Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) researchers described their observations at a symposium during the recent annual meeting of the Gerontological Society of America in Washington, D.C.

Investigators in the fields of immune function, mental health and blood chemistry showed that cells in certain areas of the body can respond to corrective measures. This means that the consequences of aging in humans may eventually be responsive to treatment," according to Dr. Gerald Rothstein, symposium organizer and director of VA's Geriatric Research, Education and Clinical Center, (GRECC) in Salt Lake City.

VA was represented at the meeting by scientists from its 16 GRECCs.

VA geriatrics researchers also are working on improving quality of life for the elderly, and they participated in symposia on clinical approaches to the increasing health challenges presented by our aging society, and on predicting and improving the results of geriatric patient care.

The following studies and observations were discussed at the symposium as indicators that aging may be a reversible process:

A researcher at the Salt Lake City GRECC has found that replacing the hormone dehydroepiandrosterone sulfate (DHEAS), which declines in the body with age, has the potential to return the immunity of the elderly to a "young-like" state by regulating communications between cells. The breakdown of cell communications is associated with a variety of age-related impairments, including decreased resistance to infection. Because of the aging process impairs immunity, the elderly may not respond to vaccines for infectious diseases, which may contribute to deaths from such diseases as influenza and pneumonia. The researcher has shown that administering DHEAS to aged mice normalizes their responses to the hepatitis vaccine, indicating that immune disorders of aging may be reversible, and that similar studies in humans are needed.

Researchers at the St. Louis GRECC have shown that the steroid pregnenolone and its derivatives enhance the memory of rodents in maze studies and improve their ability to avoid hazards. In humans, these steroids have the potential to prevent memory loss and restore impaired memory, and could ultimately be used in the treatment of Alzheimer's disease.

A researcher at the Madison, Wis., GRECC is working to reduce the occurrence of age-related cancer in the elderly. He has shown that as animals age, they develop an overgrowth of immune cells which are predisposed to malignancy. Restricting dietary intake may lead to a reduction or prevention of this immune cell overgrowth and the development of age-related cancer.

At the Little Rock, Ark., GRECC, a researcher is working to restore the immune function in the elderly through the use of nurturing cells from young donors. During aging, white blood cells gradually lose their ability to eliminate microorganisms, leading to a decline in the immunity of older people. Nurturing cells from young donors can restore function to aged white blood cells, which may lead to restoring the immune function in the elderly.

VA's 16 GRECCs are designed to increase basic knowledge of the aging process, share that knowledge with health-care providers and improve the overall quality of care of the elderly veteran.

These center of excellence investigate general aging problems, and each GRECC also focuses on research in specialized areas of aging, such as Alzheimer's disease.

There Are Hundreds Of Reasons To Keep The Dream Alive. Here Are Three.

Adopt Our Own

Annie, June and his sister Elizabeth need homes to call their own. Without families these kids have no roots and little reason to believe in "the dream." To be young, gifted and black without a permanent family means our kids have little hope for the future. To help, Lutheran Social Services is seeking responsible adoptive adults. If you're interested in sharing your love with a child, or want more information, call Linda Benson at 228-5209 and keep the dream alive...for all of us.

Dr. Wise to speak at King Convocation

Dr. C. Dexter Wise III, pastor of the Faith Ministries Interdenominational Church in Columbus, will be the keynote speaker at Otterbein College's Martin Luther King Jr. convocation this year. Wise will speak on "Issues of Today: Challenges of Tomorrow" on Monday, Jan. 18 at 11 a.m. in Cowan Hall, 30 N. Grove St.

All classes will be recessed to let students, faculty and employees attend the convocation. The public is also invited and encouraged to attend and hear this dynamic speaker.

Wise, whose preaching has been described as "daring diving and somersaults" is no stranger to the Otterbein campus. Seven years ago at Otterbein's first Martin Luther King Jr. celebration, Wise delivered a speech that electrified an overflow audience. Last spring he spoke about the role of the Black church in America as part of Otterbein's Integrative Studies Festival.

Wise has an impressive background. He began singing gospel songs at the age of five in his hometown of Baltimore, Md. He was called to preach at the age of 12 and was ordained to the gospel ministry at 19. He earned a B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania, an M.A. from Harvard University and an M.Div. from Harvard Divinity School. In 1980, he was awarded an honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters from Virginia College and Seminary in Lynchburg, Va.

From 1982 to 1991, Wise served as pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church in Columbus. Under his leadership, the church expanded to include radio and cable television broadcasts, telephone ministries, outdoor revivals and the publication of a consumer-oriented Black business directory, the Grapevine Minority Business Directory.

In November 1991, Wise organized the Faith Ministries Interdenominational Church in Columbus with six members. In less than a month the church grew to 500 members, and now it has three weekly radio broadcasts, a weekly cable television broadcast and a host of outreach ministries.

As the "Rappin' Reverend," Wise recorded several rap songs including the popular rap album, "I Ain't Into That." Wise has also founded the "I Ain't Into That Generation," a movement of more than 7,000 young people in the Columbus area who have made commitments to live drug free, crime-free and alcohol-free lives. In addition, he has published books on substance-free living and on male responsibility.

Mt. Vernon A.M.E. kicks off donor registry

TWO-TIME HEISMAN TROPHY winner Archie Griffin is one of only 25,000 people included in the National Rare Donor Registry. Griffin's blood type, called Js(b-), was one of the most widely requested rare bloods in the nation last year. People can find out if they are rare donors, or add life for patients who need them by stopping by the Mt. Vernon A.M.E. Church to give blood through the American Red Cross on Jan. 16 from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.

People can find out if they are rare donors, or simply add life for patients who need them by stopping by the Mt. Vernon A.M.E. Church to give blood through the American Red Cross on Jan. 16 from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.

"Is that good?" Archie Griffin questioned after being told his blood was rare.

Rare blood is good, especially to patients who must have blood from only 25,000 people listed in the National Rare Donor Registry, including a large number of African Americans, whose bodies will only accept certain characteristics in red blood cells.

Two-time Heisman Trophy winner Griffin is one of only 25,000 people included in the national Rare Donor Registry. Griffin's blood type, called JS(b-), was one of the most widely requested rare bloods in the nation last year.

William Hicks, M.D., in oncology at Grant Hospital said different racial groups, not just Black and white, but oriental and other racial groups as well, are often found to have common blood types. These groups usually come primarily from a specific region of the world, thus the blood types are linked genetically and passed down through the generations.

Certain blood types, which are considered to be rare, are found only in African Americans. Therefore, African American patients with these rare types who need blood depend on Black donors who have the same type.

Besides the major ABO blood types, there are other minor red cell blood types composed of antigens, such as Duffy, "U," and over 100 other known antigens that combine to form what is known as a phenotype. If that phenotype lacks many common red cell antigens, it will be categorized as "rare," since red cell antigens are passed on genetically, certain racial groups are prone to have red cell types in common. When only a few people who possess rare phenotypes donate blood, that blood must be exported by the American Red Cross and other blood banks across the region or state where the patient is hospitalized.

Often times because of the number of transfusions patients receive, their bodies naturally begin to fight off blood characteristics. They need blood that is absent of those characteristics. The characteristics are an addition to the familiar A, B, AB and O blood groups.

The American Red Cross Rare Donor Registry is a national resource for patients who need rare blood types.

Potential donors must be at least 17 years old, weight at least 105 pounds, be free from hepatitis and behavior associated with AIDS/HIV. It does not take any additional time or money to become a rare blood donor. If a person's blood is identified as rare, he or she is asked to become a member with no other obligations.

Call the Red Cross for an appointment to donate on Jan. 16 or to learn more about the Rare Donor Registry's 25th anniversary celebration, please call the Red Cross at 253-7981.

I HAVE A DREAM

Just score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon of light of hope to millions of Negro slaves who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a jubilee and daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

But one hundred years later, the Negro still is not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination.

One hundred years later, the Negro lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity. One hundred years later, the Negro is still languishing in the corners of American society and finding himself an exile in his own land. So we have come here today to mark a shameful condition.

But since we have come to this capital, we ought to reach a decision. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note, which every American was to hold fast. This note was a promise that one day, the black man as well as the white man, would be granted the same rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note insofar as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check, a check which has come back marked "insufficient funds."

We refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt. We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. So we have come to cash this check—a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice.

We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the great agency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquillizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make good on promises of democracy. Now is the time to rise from the dark and desecrated valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice. Now is the time to bring our nation from the quick sands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood. Now is the time to make justice a reality for all of God's children.

It would be fatal for this nation to overlook the urgency of the situation and to underestimate the determination of the Negro. This swelling current of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating outcome of freedom and equality. 1963 is not an end but a beginning. Those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be quiet will have a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual.

There will be neither rest nor tranquility in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

But there is something that we must do to my people who stand on the weary, god-forsaken island of despair. In the process of giving our deepest prayers, we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our deepest desire by driving them from the cap of bitterness and hatred. We must become involved in the struggle on the high plain of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to degenerate into petulant violence. Apathy and neglect are the enemy of the justice. We must, therefore, move forward with boldness.

The marvelous new militancy which has engulfed the Negro community must not lead to a spirit of bitterness and animosity. For many of our white brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their future is intertwined with ours. They know that the time has come when our common destiny is inseparably bound to the freedom. This offense we must remember is the foundation of justice must be worked for by a non-violent way.

Let us not wallow in the valley of despair. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals.

Let us not wallow in the valley of despair. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals.

Let us not wallow in the valley of despair. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals. I have a dream that one day, the Negro will be able to sit down with his white brothers and discuss the problems of the world as equals.

These are the words that moved a nation. We believe they are the best way to remember Martin Luther King, Jr.

Brookhaven student kicked up heels in London

By RAYMOND L. SMITH
Call and Post Staff Writer

A Brookhaven High School senior was one of seven cheerleaders selected to march in London, England's New Year's Day Parade on Jan. 1. She was selected after competing against 800 others who attended an OSU cheerleading camp held in the summer of 1992.

Tracie Collins, 17, made her first trip to Europe as one of more than 1,200 U.S. cheerleaders who will be participating in the parade. Collins, who has been cheerleading for four years, was especially thrilled about meeting young people from across the U.S.

"This was the second greatest accomplishment in my lifetime," said Collins. "Last year, I had a private showing of my artwork at the Redwood Development Center. I consider that as my greatest accomplishment."

Collins is the daughter of Theresa Collins, a single mother and an employee of the Ohio Department of Human Services. The teen began cheerleading after watching her older sister, Robin, practice and perform cheerleading routines as part of the Brookhaven cheerleading squad.

"I thought it would be fun to do," said Collins. "The first two years were hard, but I got used to it. I was eventually named captain of the reserve cheerleading squad."

Because her sister was seen as one of the school's best cheerleaders, Collins has worked very hard at proving her abilities. She spent a lot of hours practicing on her own to perfect her skills. "Not everybody can become a cheerleader," said Collins. "It takes a lot of practice. But you don't look at practicing (SEE LONDON/PAGE 10B)"

High-powered education summit to reform Ohio's educational system

By CYNTHIA BEARD
Call and Post Contributing Writer

Education Summit II, a conference primarily of educators and business leaders, was held at the Ohio Regency in Columbus December 16, 1992. With about 400 in attendance, Ohio's Superintendent of Public Instruction Ted Sanders indicated this may be the largest group to gather for the intended purpose.

The purpose was to discuss a shared vision for reform of Ohio's system of education. After Superintendent Sanders opened the day-long meeting, leaders in Ohio's General Assembly, business community, current State Board of Education president Chet Roush, and Governor Voinovich addressed the Summit.

TRV executive Joe Gorman discussed the nature of the problem and proposed solutions. "Serious problems threatening to erode the system must be addressed in a holistic way... the system of education is the very heart of the problem." As an example, Mr. Gorman indicated there had been little progress in literacy rates since the times of slavery when only one in ten slaves could read.

The Business Roundtable advocates an outcome-based system where success is rewarded and failure punished not only on an individual basis, but also school by school.

Governor Voinovich began his remarks by telling attendees of his efforts to convince members of the House of Representatives that they should be supportive of the current budget balancing proposals.

Calling education "everybody's business" and the number one domestic priority, Gov. Voinovich suggested a need to expand the people involved. Recalling the discussion at the last Summit that real reform begins at the grassroots level (SEE SUMMIT/PAGE 10B)

Expert warns: Arm early for college

[Editor's Note: Nancy Gibson, an admissions counselor at Capital University, wrote the following article titled "Prepare early when thinking of applying to college" for publication in this edition of the Call and Post.]

Now that you're back into the swing of things at school, it's important to start thinking about what you need to do to prepare for college.

The most important thing is to make sure you have taken all the required courses you need to graduate, along with the types of courses most colleges and universities require.

Most schools require four (4) years of English, three (3) years of mathematics, three (3) years of social sciences, three (3) years of science, two (2) years of a foreign language and one (1) fine art unit. Make sure you're on the right track with your course work! Not having the required classes may result in the university or college rejecting your applications.

Next, make sure you take either the American College Testing (ACT) board or the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). The most common test in Ohio is the ACT. If you're a senior, plan to take one of these this Fall, as you may want to retake it in the Spring if you're not satisfied with your score.

Finally, attend any presentations or financial aid workshops that college representatives make at your school. You should also try to attend any open houses that many colleges and universities hold in the Fall. By doing this, you will get to visit the campus and learn more general information about the school. Be sure to find out about faculty/student ratios, what programs and majors are offered, what types of scholarships or grants are available, what the residence halls are like and what types of activities and social (SEE COLLEGE/PAGE 11B)

Summit

community by community, the Governor indicated they had 1000 additional people interested in attending this year's Summit.

The Governor touted his good relationship with "the most outstanding education leader in the country", Superintendent Ted Sanders. Advocating linking reform to provision of financial resources, Gov. Voinovich said "if people believe they will get something for their money, they will invest in educational improvements."

Stating there is a "love factor" necessary for education reform and a child's development, Voinovich concluded, "The greatest thing you can do for children is educate them, give them the ability to work, support self and family."

Three reports were presented and discussed by Summit participants.

The long talked about "Gaps Analysis" was presented as "Removing the Barriers: Unleashing Ohio's Learning Power". This report provides an analysis of about 256 person's perceptions of barriers in delivery of a quality education and proposes some solutions.

Another in the series of studies of school finance was presented by Ohio State University Professor Howard Fleeter. School finance is one of the most critical, controversial, and misunderstood issues in school reform. At issue is the balance of resources from one school district to another.

Fleeter's study looks at all three sides of the issue of school finance - equity, adequacy and reliability. Five key recommendations are offered:

- 1) Make permanent the $50 million equity fund included in the 92-93 budget.
- 2) Modify the basic formula for state aid to districts by eliminating a guaranteed amount and increasing the amount allowed for the charge-off.
- 3) Increase funds for state support.
- 4) Pool local revenue to be distributed to school districts.
- 5) Increase opportunities for local growth.

Lila Carol and Luvern Cunningham delivered the final report on governance. Finding that education and "human service" systems are "structured in a way which leads to incoherence", and accountability measures for the governor, legislative branch and departments lacking, the researchers suggested radical changes in thinking and "the way we do business".

Carol said such changes would require 3 Cs - courage, commitment and consistency. Recommendations included clarification of the role of local boards of education and linking the work of the State Board of Education and the Board of Regents for shared environmental scanning and planning activities. Licensing of teachers by professional schools and greater "inter" and "intra" agency collaboration were also recommended.

Dr. Cunningham acknowledged his most controversial recommendation is to consider dismantling large districts into smaller units when a district's size becomes unmanageable. Participants discussing the proposals in a small group had difficulty understanding the report's call for centralization in some cases, and decentralization in other cases.

The Summit concluded with a summary of participant comments. With regard to performance-based outcomes, participants suggested multi-dimensional assessment methods, and relaying the desired outcomes to communities. In making changes, a massive PR campaign is necessary.

Participants expressed concerns about the political efficacy of implementing the funding equity proposals. One comment, "Pooling is fair, but won't fly." The finance report has value, but will not be anywhere without a communication plan."

With regard to governance, participants recommended phasing in proposed changes and a review of teachers unions for potential barriers to implementation.

A series of statewide teleconferences, "Re-inventing School-Community Governance" will begin January 14, 1993. Check with the Department of Education for participation.

Analysis/Editorial
The education reform train is moving in Ohio. The pace is slow, but the train is on the track, as the major power players are attempting to operate in a more positive vein, get in gear and move in sync. Whether true reform and great improvement actually occur is questionable. Change, on the other hand, will definitely occur.

The question is, where will you be as change happens? Will the reform train hit you square in the face, run you over, pass you by, or will you be a passenger on the train?

Helping your child out in school may involve a little light lifting

If you're wondering how your child is doing in school, why wait for a report card? Just pick up the phone and call his teacher.

It's really very easy. Simply introduce yourself and suggest that you set up a regular time to touch base by phone for five or ten minutes each month. This way, you and the teacher can discuss your child's progress, upcoming projects or areas where your child might need a little extra-help. And the two of you will become a team working toward a common goal: helping your child get as much out of school as possible.

So try calling your child's teacher once a month. It'll help you strengthen your relationship with someone who's very important, indeed. Your child.

You Have The Power.

For the past decade, Ashland Oil has dedicated its regional corporate advertising to supporting education. We invite you to take an active part in your local educational programs. After all, you have the power to improve your child's education. You have the power to improve the future.

as a chore, instead it is something that comes naturally. You want to make your routines perfect."

Collins says the toughest part about cheerleading is coming up with words to go with the routines.

"It's a long process," said Collins. "It takes a lot of team work."

The Brookhaven cheerleading squad cheers for the Brookhaven football and basketball teams. It is especially fun for the cheerleaders because both of the Brookhaven teams have a history of winning.

"You look forward to going to the games," said Collins. "Our football team went to the semifinals. We were a part of that."

Although the European trip was sponsored by the Universal Cheerleading Association, Collins' mother was responsible for paying for the $1,900 in transportation and hotel costs needed for the trip.

"The trip was tough on me, but she really wanted me to go," said Collins. "She has always sacrificed for me and my sister. I really appreciate the heartships she has gone through to support us."

Cheerleading has helped her become more mature, says Collins.

"It is like being in a big family," said Collins. "You have to be able to work with others, compromise, and fulfill your responsibility to others."

Collins is also active in the Brookhaven DECA one program, is the treasurer of the school's senior cabinet and has managed to maintain a 3.3 grade point average in her senior year. She wants to become a law enforcement officer.

"I became involved in a variety of programs while in high school because I enjoyed it," said Collins. "I believe you enjoy school when you are involved. Really, you are not aware of what is happening in school unless you are involved in a lot of activities."

Tudor's friend, Robert Yuill, was inside the residence at the time, but did not suffer any serious injuries.

Police probe East Livingston shooting

The November shooting death of Calvin S. Cohen, 41, of Hartford, CT, has been designated "Crime of the Week" in the Crime Stoppers Program for the Week of January 11, 1993.

Calvin Cohen and his five associates, all from out of state, stopped at Jequetta's Market at 1819 E. Livingston Ave., to buy beer and, if possible, sell jewelry about 10 p.m. on November 23, 1992.

The victim and his friends were in the business of travelling across the country selling jewelry to persons obviously involved in the drug trade. While at the store, Cohen and two of his companions exited their vehicle, a 1968 gray Fleetwood Cadillac, approached several individuals on the lot, and attempted to sell them some jewelry.

After the sale was made, they returned to their vehicle and waited for another companion who was inside the store buying beer. Meanwhile, the individual who purchased the jewelry evidently learned from others on the lot that the jewelry the salesmen were selling was not genuine and was only brass costume jewelry. A few moments later, shots were fired in the direction of the Fleetwood Cadillac. Cohen was seated in the front passenger seat when one of the bullets came through the cars rear window, hitting Cohen in the back of the head. Cohen's companion drove him to James Road and Livingston Ave., where they sought help. Cohen later died at Grant Medical Center.

The shooter is described as a Black male, light complexion, 18-22 years of age, 5'9"-6-foot-tall and 160-170 lbs. He has a thin mustache, earring in his left ear, and he was wearing red pants and a long or full length starter type jacket (possible logo L.A. Kings or L.A. Raiders). The shooter's hair was shaved or cut close on the sides with "Plats" of short dread locks on the top. He also carried a pager. Part of the pager number is "785."

Investigators believe the shooter is a regular drug trader who hangs out in the area of Fairwood and Livingston Avenues, and are seeking public assistance in getting this suspect identified.

Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of up to $1,000, with a deadline of January 20, 1993 for any information leading to an arrest and indictment in this crime. Information received after January 20, 1993, could qualify the caller for a lesser reward. Call in your information at 645-TIPS.

Crime Stoppers also takes calls from persons with information about any felony. Information leading to the arrest and indictment of a felony suspect could qualify the caller for a reward as determined by the Crime Stoppers Reward Committee.

A special coding system protects the identity of the caller, but allows the caller to be contacted at a later time.

Reward funds come from private donations to Crime Stoppers, a non-profit organization sponsored by the Columbus Division of Police and Fire, Columbus Call and Post, The Columbus Dispatch, Columbus (Downtown) Kiwanis, 610 WTVN

Radio, 92 WMNI Radio, Columbus Messenger, Suburban News Publications, WCBE Radio, and The Madison Press, P.O. Box 1225, Columbus, OH 43216.

Watch for re-enactment of each "Crime of the Week" during newscasts on WSYX-TV Channel 6, Sunday 11 p.m. and Monday 6 a.m., noon and 5:30 p.m.

The Lottery takes its fun and games very seriously.

The lottery is serious when it comes to making a difference in the lives of Ohioans through the sale of its games.

For instance, thousands of Ohio Lottery retailers have benefited from increased traffic and sales.

Hundreds of jobs have been created through Lottery vendors, suppliers, and the Lottery headquarters and regional offices.

And Ohio's schools receive all of the Lottery's profits. In fiscal 1992, the Lottery did its part to help Ohio education by contributing $641,000,000.

The Ohio Lottery is glad it can add enjoyment to the lives of people who play. But when it comes to making a positive difference in the lives of people all across Ohio—from retailers to employees to schoolkids—the Lottery is very serious about its fun and games.

100% of Lottery profits help support Ohio schools.

MORE THAN 200,000 PEOPLE CROWDED outside of the Lincoln Memorial in 1963 to hear Rev. (Dr.) Martin Luther King Jr., among other speakers, tell them the importance of the Civil Rights movement to their time and to history.

I HAVE A DREAM

By Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Aug. 28, 1963

(The first integrated protest march was held in Washington, D.C. with an estimated 200,000 participating. Dr. King delivered his "I Have A Dream" speech from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Afterwards, he met President John F. Kennedy at the White House.)

"I am happy to join with you today in what will go down in history as the greatest demonstration for freedom in the history of our nation.

Five score years ago, a great American, in whose symbolic shadow we stand today, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. This momentous decree came as a great beacon light of hope to millions of Negro slaves, who had been seared in the flames of withering injustice. It came as a joyous daybreak to end the long night of their captivity.

But one hundred years later, the Negro is still not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination. One hundred years later, the Negro lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity. One hundred years later, the Negro is still languished in the corners of American society and finds himself an exile in his own land. So we have come here today to dramatize a shameful condition.

In a sense, we've come to our nation's Capitol to cash a check. When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American was to fall heir. This note was a promise that all men -- yes, Black men as well as White men -- would be guaranteed the unalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

It is obvious today that America has defaulted on this promissory note, insofar as her citizens of color are concerned. Instead of honoring this sacred obligation, America has given the Negro people a bad check; a check which has come back marked "insufficient funds." But we refuse to believe that the bank of justice is bankrupt. We refuse to believe that there are insufficient funds in the great vaults of opportunity of this nation. So we've come to cash this check -- a check that will give us upon demand the riches of freedom and the security of justice. We have also come to this hallowed spot to remind America of the fierce urgency of now. This is not the time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquilizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make real the promises of Democracy. Now is the time to rise from the dark and desolate valley of segregation to the sunlit path of racial justice. Now is the time to lift our nation from the quicksands of racial injustice to the solid rock of brotherhood. Now is the time to make justice reality for all of God's children.

It would be fatal for the nation to overlook the urgency of the moment. This sweltering summer of the Negro's legitimate discontent will not pass until there is an invigorating autumn of freedom and equality. Nineteen sixty-three is not an end, but a beginning. Those who hope that the Negro needed to blow off steam and will now be content with a rude awakening if the nation returns to business as usual. There will be neither rest nor tranquility in America until the Negro is granted his citizenship rights. The whirlwinds of revolt will continue to shake the foundations of our nation until the bright day of justice emerges.

But there is something that I must say to my people who stand on the warm threshold which leads to the palace of justice. In the process of gaining our rightful place we must not be guilty of wrongful deeds. Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred.

We must forever conduct our struggle on the high plane of dignity and discipline. We must not allow our creative protest to degenerate into physical violence. Again and again we must rise to the majestic heights of meeting physical force with soul force. The marvelous new militancy which has engulfed the Negro community must not lead us to a distrust of all White people. For many of our White brothers, as evidenced by their presence here today, have come to realize that their destiny is tied up with our destiny. And they have come to realize that their freedom is inextricably bound to our freedom. We cannot walk alone.

And as we walk, we must make the pledge that we shall always march ahead. We cannot turn back. There are those who ask the devotees of civil rights, "When will you be satisfied?" We can never be satisfied as long as the Negro is the victim of the unspeakable horrors of police brutality. We can never be satisfied as long as our bodies, heavy with the fatigue of travel, cannot gain lodging in the motels of the highways and the hotels of the cities. We cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro's basic mobility is from a smaller ghetto to a larger one. We can never be satisfied as long as our children are stripped of their selfhood and robbed of their dignity by signs stating "For Whites Only." We cannot be satisfied as long as the Negro in Mississippi cannot vote and a Negro in New York believes he has nothing for which to vote. No, no, we are not satisfied, and we will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.

I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come from narrow jail cells. Some of you have come from areas where your quest for freedom left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been the veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive.

Go back to Mississippi, go back to Alabama, go back to South Carolina, go back to Georgia, go back to Louisiana, go back to the slums and ghettos of our northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed. Let us not wallow in the valley of despair.

I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream, it is a dream deeply rooted in the American Dream.

"I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal.'"

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slaveowners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood; I have a dream --

That one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice; I have a dream --

That my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character; I have a dream today.

I have a dream that one day, down in Alabama, with its vicious racists, with its governor having his lips dripping with the words of interposition and nullification; one day right there in Alabama little Black boys and Black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and white girls as sisters and brothers; I have a dream today --

I have a dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plane and crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

This is our hope. This is the faith that I go back to the South with. With this faith we will be able to hew out the mountain of despair, a stone of hope. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood. With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing that we will be free one day.

This will be the day ... This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning "My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring," and if America is to be a great nation -- this must become true.

So let freedom ring -- from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire, let freedom ring; from the mighty mountains of New York, let freedom ring -- from the heightening Alleghenys of Pennsylvania!

Let freedom ring from the snowcapped Rockies of Colorado!

Let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California!

But not only that; let freedom ring from Stone Mountain of Georgia!

Let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain of Tennessee!

Let freedom ring from every hill and mole hill of Mississippi. From every mountainside, let freedom ring.

When we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up the day when all of God's children, Black men and White men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, "Free at Last! Free at last! Thank God almighty, we are free at last!"

KING CHAPEL IN 14TH YEAR

King Fellows' exemplify life of Dr. M.L. King Jr.

In 612 B.C., the prophet Jeremiah told the Israelites: go ye and fro through the streets of Jerusalem and say now, thus saith the Lord, seek ye in the broad places there, if ye can find a man if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth....

This has been one of the missions of the Martin Luther King Jr. International Memorial Chapel on the Morehouse College campus in Atlanta. After its dedication in 1978, the Chapel has been recognized as one of the greatest memorials existing in honor of the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

As a result of the wisdom and maturity of its first dean, the Rev. Dr. Lawrence Edward Carter Sr., King Chapel stands as the citadel of ecumenism, uniting all communions, just as the prototypical Pathfinder endeavored to do. In its programmatic mission as well as the scope of its congregation, the King Chapel ministry is interdenominational, interracial, interfaith and interdisciplinary.

The dynamic ministries that King Chapel provides benefit all students matriculating in the Atlanta University Center (AUC) in general, but Morehouse College in particular. Its goal is to enhance their religious, spiritual and intellectual capacities. Scholarships have also been established to assist students who are primarily interested in ministerial fields with their financial burdens.

In addition, a coveted honor is bestowed each year by naming a student who best exemplifies the qualities portrayed in the life of Dr. King as the King Fellow. This student represents the Chapel in various events and affairs sponsored by the College, and is a spokesperson on the philosophy of nonviolence and civil rights. He is responsible for assisting with all the administrative duties that must be done in order for the Chapel to continue its productivity in service and commitment.

The King Fellow plays an active role in the worship service held each Sunday, and is challenged to inspire his colleagues through words and deeds. He is expected to uphold the principles set forth by our ancestors whose shoulders we stand upon and strive to be the vanguard for manhood.

Each year the pivotal question is raised to Dean Carter, "Is there such a man?"

For the past five years, as the clarion call went forth, the answer came back each year with a resounding, "Yes!" The five gentlemen who have been privileged to serve as King Fellows are men who have goals to achieve, charges to keep and missions to fulfill.

The first person to serve as the Martin Luther King Jr. Fellow was the Rev. Eric Taylor, a graduate in the class of 1987, who served during the 1986-87 school year. He resides in Atlanta and is the coordinator of the Pediatrics AIDS Demonstration Project, Department of Pediatrics, Morehouse School of Medicine. Rev. Taylor, who is also preparing to release an album entitled, "Save the Children," is the assistant pastor of the Providence Missionary Baptist Church.

The second person to be named the King Fellow was the Rev. Samuel T. Lee, a graduate in the class of 1988, who served during the 1987-88 school year. He recently received the Master of Divinity degree from Harvard Divinity School, Cambridge, Mass. Presently, he is a theologian-in-residence at the Hartford Memorial Baptist Church, Detroit, Mich., where he is active in the Youth Ministry Department.

The third person to hold this position was the Rev. Porter Denson, a graduate in the class of 1989. He served as the King Fellow during the 1988-89 school year. Rev. Denson plans to attend the Interdenominational Theological Center in Atlanta, and is interested in African-American church history. His career goal is to become a Baptist pastor.

The fourth person to be named the M.L.K. Fellow was the Rev. Joseph Carlos Robinson, a graduate in the class of 1991, who served during the 1990-91 school term. He is presently a candidate for the Master of Divinity degree at the Harvard Divinity School.

The fifth person to hold the position as the Martin Luther King Jr. Fellow is the Rev. Ethol L. Nix Jr., a member of the class of 1995. He is serving during the 1992-93 school term and is a history/pre-law major. His goal is to attend the Harvard Law and Divinity Schools and obtain the Doctor of Jurisprudence and Master of Divinity degrees.

Rev. Nix has accepted an invitation to be guest speaker at the 8th annual Martin Luther King Jr. Birthday Breakfast to be held at 9 a.m. Monday, Jan. 18 in Battelle Hall at the Ohio Convention Center.

The prayer of these gentlemen, reports Rev. Nix, has been the one of J.G. Holland: "God, make us men! A time like this demands strong minds, ready hands and true faith. Men whom the love of above the fog in public duty and private thinking."

The ninth annual Martin Luther King Jr. College of Ministers and Laity (Religious Emphasis Week) will be celebrated in the Martin Luther King Jr. International

Chapel from Feb. 21 through March 1. Morehouse College President Leroy Keith will preside. The theme of the observance will be "The African-American Church Ministering Admists a World of Diversity."

Honorable bishops to speak during Founder's Day Weekend celebration

This year's Founder's Day Weekend of Aeon Bible College to be held Jan. 15 and 16 at the Christ of Christ, 1200 Brentnell, where Dr. Eugene Lundy is pastor, will be a time of reflection.

"As we approach Black History Month and Martin Luther King's Birthday, it is only fitting that we review our religious history, a history that started in Columbus," said Elder C. Nickerson Bolden, Aeon's director of development.

"One of the main purpose of Founder's Day Weekend is to showcase some of the ministries developing from the 52-year history of Aeon Bible College. This year we will feature Bishop Clifton Jones. Not only is Bishop Jones an Aeon graduate, he is currently a member of the Aeon Board of directors," Bolden said.

Now pastoring in the city of Philadelphia, Miss., Bishop Jones said when asked about returning to Columbus, "That's where I got my start." Consider it a great opportunity to make a contribution to the institution that made such a great contribution.

Bishop Jones is the scheduled speaker for Friday night, and Sharon Johnson-Francis and the Living Faith Apostolic Choir are scheduled to sing.

Saturday night's highlights include, Bishop James E. Tyson, an Aeon faculty member and Dr. Betty Showell Tyson, wife of Bishop Tyson and newly elected president of Aeon.

Bishop Tyson's choir, the Christ Church Apostolic Unity Choir along with Dr. Leonard Scott, of the Tyscot Records will be the featured choir.

A QUIET EXEMPLIFICATION OF COURAGE, DIGNITY AND DETERMINATION — Rosa Louise Parks is a symbol to all Americans to remain free. Parks and Martin Luther King, Jr., promoted the movement for change.

Mother of Civil Rights: Rosa Louise Parks

Rosa Louise Parks is nationally recognized as the "Mother of the Modern Day Civil Rights Movement" in America. Her refusal to surrender her seat to a white male passenger on a Montgomery, Alabama bus, December 1, 1955, triggered a wave of protest December 5, 1955, that reverberated throughout the United States.

Her quiet, courageous act changed America, its view of Black people and redirected the course of history.

Mrs. Parks was born Rosa Louise McCauley, February 4, 1913 in Tuskegee, Alabama. She was the first child of James and Leona Edwards McCauley. Her brother, Sylvester McCauley, now deceased, was born August 20, 1915. Later, the family moved to Pine Level, Alabama where Rose was reared and educated in the rural school.

When she completed her education in Pine Level at age 11, her mother, Leona, enrolled her in Montgomery Industrial School for Girls (Miss White's School for Girls), a private institution. After finishing Miss White's School, she went on to Alabama State Teacher's College High School. However, she was unable to graduate with her class because of the illness of her grandmother Rose Edwards and later her death.

As Rosa prepared to return to Alabama State, her mother also became ill. Therefore, she continued to take care of their home and care for her mother outside of the home. Rosa received her high school diploma in 1934, after her marriage to Raymond Parks, December 18, 1932.

Raymond, now deceased, born in Wedowee, Alabama, Randolph County, February 12, 1903, received little formal education due to racial segregation. He was a self educated person with the assistance of his mother, Geri Parks. His immaculate dress and his thorough knowledge of domestic affairs and current events made most think he was college educated. He supported and encouraged Rosa's desire to complete her formal education.

Mr. Parks was an early activist in the effort to free the "Scottsboro Boys," a celebrate case in the 1930's. Together, Raymond and Rosa worked in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP's) programs. He was an active member and she served as secretary and later youth leader of the local branch. At the time of her arrest, she was preparing for a major youth conference.

After the arrest of Rosa Parks, black people of Montgomery and sympathizers of other races organized and promoted a boycott of the city bus-line that lasted 381 days. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., was appointed the spokesperson for the bus boycott and taught non-violence to all participants. Contingent with the protest in Montgomery, others took shape throughout the south and the country. They took form as sit-ins, eat-ins, swim-ins, and similar causes. Thousands of courageous people joined the "protest" to demand equal rights for all people.

Since 1965, Mrs. Parks has been employed by Congressman John Conyers, first Congressional District of Michigan. In February, 1987 she began the Rosa and Raymond Parks Institute for Self Development. The purpose, is to motivate and direct the "average" youth not targeted by other programs to achieve their highest potential. Rosa Parks sees the energy of young people as a real force for change. It is among her most treasured themes of human priorities as she speaks to young people of all ages at schools, colleges and national organizations around the country.

Mrs. Parks has received ten honorary doctorate degrees, hundreds of plaques, certificates, citations; awards and keys to several cities. Among them are the NAACP's Spingarn Medal, the UAW's Social Justice Award, the Martin Luther King, Jr., Non-Violent Peace Prize and most recently in May of 1987, the Roger Joseph Prize with a cash award of ten thousand dollars, from the Hebrew Union College.

A quiet exemplification of courage and determination; Rosa Parks is a symbol to all Americans to remain free.

Moody/Nolan Ltd., Inc. salutes the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. His call for justice and his vision of a brotherhood in man are a model for every age.

ALBERTA CHRISTINE WILLIAMS KING

1903 - 1974

Alberta Christine Williams King was born Sept. 13, 1903, in Atlanta, Georgia, one of three children of the late Rev. and Mrs. Adam Daniel Williams. Rev. Williams was Pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church, in Atlanta, Georgia from 1894, until his death in 1931.

Mrs. King was educated in the Public Schools of Atlanta, Spelman Seminary, Hampton Institute, and received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Morris Brown College.

In her early life she was exposed to the teachings and experiences which were to prepare her for the historic events in which she was later to participate. The Williams family was imbued with a Christian heritage which held that the human spirit will prevail over oppression and that love and brotherhood will conquer hate and violence. This concept carried over into her life as she reared her own family.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1926, she was married to Martin Luther King, then a student at Morehouse College, and who later became the assistant pastor and upon the death of Mrs. King's father, the Rev. A.D.

Williams, in 1931, became pastor of historic Ebenezer Baptist Church. Mrs. King was the mother of three children, one of whom was the preeminent leader of the modern movement for non-violent social change, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. In addition to raising the family, Mrs. King had a long and widely admired career, first as an educator in the Atlanta public school system, and then as a church leader and acknowledged "Mother" of the Movement.

On June 30, 1974, during the morning worship at Ebenezer, as she was playing the organ and leading the congregation in sing "The Lord's Prayer," in sudden and a profoundly tragic instant her life was taken.

Her life affected eternity in a way that makes the world better because she passed this way.

King Arts Complex chief well-qualified for post

By GWEN WALTERS
Call and Post Contributing Writer

The path to leadership of the Martin Luther King Jr. Performing and Cultural Arts Complex has taken Dr. Barbara Nicholson on a journey through several university teaching assignments and a District of Columbia government cabinet post. She is known and admired both in Columbus, where she earned a doctorate from The Ohio State University, and across the nation as a dedicated, hard-working arts administrator.

Dr. Nicholson is also a talented artist/designer in her own right. She owns and operates a fashion design company creatively dubbed Champagne and Grits.

She has described herself as a "shoot from the hip" person who calls shots as she sees them. Others call her insightful, sensitive and receptive. One Columbus community activist recently observed after participating in a civic leadership meeting with her "not too much gets lost that lady. She was two steps ahead of all of us."

Dr. Nicholson currently serves on the boards of several organizations, including New African Visions, D.C. Art/Works and Thelonious Monk Institute of Jazz in Durham, N.C. She is a former board member of the Mid-Atlantic Arts Foundation, the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies and chair emerita of the Association of American Cultures.

As executive director of the King Arts Complex in Columbus since April of 1992, Nicholson has infused the organization with a stunning degree of spiritual energy. From the critically acclaimed photography exhibition "Songs of My People" to the brilliant December production of Langston Hughes' "Black Nativity," Nicholson has kept her promise to keep the halls of the King Arts Complex "buzzing with activity."

"My vision for the King Arts Complex," says Nicholson, "is deeply rooted in the teachings and philosophy of Dr. King. Thus as we preserve and celebrate the culture of African-Americans through the use of creative expressions, we will work towards promoting multi-cultural awareness and understanding; we will work towards developing caring, responsible individuals; we will work towards nurturing self-confidence and self-actualization;" and Dr. Nicholson resolves, "we will fight fiercely to eliminate attitudes and misunderstandings that perpetuate racism, classism and sexism in our society."

The January issue of Columbus Monthly highlights Barbara Nicholson as a leader to watch in 1993.

Dr. Nicholson welcomes the scrutiny as she moves the King Arts Complex to new heights in community service and artistic achievement.

By GWEN WALTERS

Call and Post Contributing Writer
The Martin Luther King Jr. Performing and Cultural Arts Complex (the King Arts Complex) is a unique institution which excels as a living monument to the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. During its six-year history, the King Arts Complex, located on Near East Side at 867 Mt. Vernon Ave., has served the greater Columbus community through a variety of performing and cultural arts productions, exhibitions and educational activities. Its growth has been observed as dramatic; its superior reputation for artistic accomplishment described solid and well-deserved.

The September through June performance art season will feature "a jazz series that will present national, regional and local artists in the tradition of the jazz history of Columbus," explains Smith. She adds proudly, "Our history of excellence in performance art is our goal for the future."

Smith is also excited about the promise the future for cooperative ventures between the King Arts Complex and other community-based organizations. "The King Arts Complex," says Smith, "will

As Executive Director Dr. Barbara Nicholson peers into the future, she sees the facility expanding and expanding its programming. She believes that while there is much to be proud of, there is still much to be accomplished.

The King Arts Complex Cultural Arts Director Bettye Stull agrees. Stull oversees visual arts and educational activities. "As we move into the future," says Stull, "the King Arts Complex will be a cultural mecca to inspire artists to expand their horizons."

Stull continues, "We will enhance our reputation as a showcase for both emerging and established African-American artists." And, Stull also envisions growth within the King Arts Complex's educational unit. "Our educational programs and activities will afford more and more children the opportunity to learn creative expression in professional visual and performing arts."

The institution's Deputy Director Sandra Smith sees no limit to the King Arts Complex's future. Smith, develop partnerships that will speak to our mission of service in the community."

The King Arts Complex also presents a varied program of events for the Martin Luther King Jr. birthday celebration. The Ko-Thai Dance Company will highlight the weekend with a performance on Saturday, Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the theatre.

Ko-Thai's home base is Milwaukee, Wisc., but the company enjoys international acclaim. The Village Voice raves of one performance... "so much unity; it is a beautiful vision of the world." And after Ko-Thai captivated an audience at Virginia Commonwealth University, a critic exclaimed, "This company soars above other companies."

Ko-Thai's vision beats to the rhythm of a different drum and so does the vision of the King Arts Complex. Deputy Director Smith declares "Ko-Thai is an example of the type of performances we are planning to bring to the Columbus community."

"His life informed us, his dreams sustain us yet."

Martin Luther King, Jr. was the conscience of his generation. A Southerner, a black man, he gazed upon the great wall of segregation and saw that the power of love could bring it down.

From the pain and exhaustion of his fight to free all people from the bondage of separation and injustice, he wrung his eloquent statement of his dream of what America could be.

He helped us overcome our ignorance of one another. He spoke out against a war he felt was unjust as he had spoken out against laws that were unfair.

He made our nation stronger because he made it better. Honored by kings, he continued to his last days to strive for a world where the poorest and humblest among us could enjoy the fulfillment of the promises of our founding fathers.

His life informed us, his dreams sustain us yet.

Message from the Governor:

It is vitally important that as we remember Dr. King and his work toward non-violent social change, that we also look forward. We must ask ourselves and put into action what we can do as individuals to make our neighborhoods, our city, and our state a better place.

As the Governor of Ohio, I face this challenge each day. Making the State of Ohio a better place means creating opportunities for all Ohioans, including minorities and women. I am committed to equal opportunity in the State of Ohio, and I am proud of my administration's accomplishments in this area. ## New book by Ossie Davis targets young readers

"In 'Just Like Martin,' Ossie Davis retells a vital part of American history in an honest, refreshing and inspiring way, making it a little easier to understand the exciting but maddening times we live in," notes film director Spike Lee.

Davis' first novel opens in 1963 with everyone from the close-knit community preparing for the freedom march on Washington, D.C.

Young Isaac Stone worships Martin Luther King Jr. and wants to be just like him, but his father has seen too much violence to believe that passive resistance can be the answer.

Set in Alabama, the powerful novel explores racism and non-violence through the eyes and ears of a boy in early days of a monumental and continuing struggle for civil rights.

He and wife, actress Ruby Dee, were recently inducted into the NAACP Image Award Hall of Fame.

ATLANTA EVENTS PLANNED

Atlanta's King Center marks 25th anniversary

ATLANTA -- The Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, Inc. is hosting a landmark celebration to honor the life of slain civil rights hero, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The celebration, which began Jan. 10 and continues through Sunday, Jan. 18, marks the anniversary of what would've been Dr. King's 64th birthday (Jan. 15), the King Center's 25th anniversary observance and the 18th national day to be held in his honor.

This year's theme is "Where Do We Go From Here? Nonviolence: Learning It, Living It, Teaching It." The King Week observance is not only to commemorate the achievements of Dr. King, but also help create a national commitment to applying his teachings of nonviolence in campaigns against racism, violence and poverty. In keeping with the Center's mission, the program focuses on the education and training of people worldwide -- especially young people, in the development and implementation of nonviolent strategies for conflict-resolution.

The schedule of events taking place in Atlanta and elsewhere during King Week '93 includes the 17th annual Interfaith Service (Washington, D.C., 8 to 11 a.m., Jan. 18), the "Celebration '93" entertainment tribute (Atlanta Civic Center, 8 to 11 p.m., Jan. 17), the 25th annual Ecumenical Service (Ebenezer Baptist Church, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Jan. 18), the annual "Salute to Greatness" dinner (Atlanta Hilton, 6 to 9 p.m., Jan. 16) the National March of Celebration (Washington, D.C., 1 p.m., Jan. 18) and a star-studded National Parade of Celebration (noon, Jan. 16).

As is customary, Mrs. Coretta Scott King, founding president and chief executive officer of the King Center, will deliver the annual "State of the Dream" address, traditionally a highlight of King Week activities. Mrs. King will speak at Ebenezer Baptist Church, Atlanta, at 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17.

Although there was no awarding of the Martin Luther King Jr. Peace Prize last year, the decision has been made to offer the award this year, should a candidate emerge as being worthy of the most prestigious honor to be presented by the Center. Nominations of candidates are currently being solicited and accepted by the Martin Luther King Jr. Peace Prize Selection Committee. For more information, contact Denise McFall at (404)-524-1958.

Commemoration of the Center's 25th anniversary is expected to draw a largest array of international and national leaders, activists, public figures and celebrities ever before in the history of the event.

We share in the dream of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., for the aspirations of Black youth to advance themselves through higher education.

LIFT EVERY VOICE AND SING

BY

JAMES WELDON JOHNSON

Lift ev'ry voice and sing, Till earth and heaven ring,
Ring with the harmonies of Liberty; Let our rejoicing rise
High as the list'ning skies; Let it resound loud as the rolling sea.
Sing a song full of the faith that the dark past has taught us,
Sing a song full of the hope that the present has brought us,
Facing the rising sun, of our new day begun,
Let us march on till victory is won.

Stony the road we trod, Bitter the chast'ning rod,
Felt in the days when hope unborn had died;
Yet with a steady beat, Have not our weary feet,
Come to the place for which our fathers sighed?
We have come over a way that with tears has been watered,
We have come treading our path thro' the blood of the slaughtered,
Out from the gloomy past, Till now we stand at last,
Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast.

God of our weary years, God of our silent tears,
Thou who has brought us thus far on the way;
Thou who hast by Thy might, Led us into the light,
Keep us forever in the path, we pray.
Lest our feet stray from the places, our God, where we met Thee
Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world, we forget Thee;
Shadowed beneath Thy hand, May we forever stand,
True to our God, True to our Native land.

KEEPING THE DREAM ALIVE

"America has given the Negro people a bad check, a check which has come back marked 'insufficient funds'."

...sncc founder

SNCC's fight for rights recorded by photographer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. -- In the early 1960s, while Malcolm X was giving angry and eloquent speeches promoting Black nationalism, other activists were fighting for civil rights in the communities of the rural South.

In "Memories of the Southern Civil Rights Movement," noted photojournalist Danny Lyon recalls in words and photographs his experiences as the first staff photographer for the Atlanta-based Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC, pronounced "snick"), an organization that had a reputation as one of the most committed and confrontational groups fighting for civil rights.

The book was published last month by the University of North Carolina Press in paperback ($19.95) and hardcover ($39.95). For toll-free credit card orders, call 1-800-848-6224.

"Memories of the Southern Civil Rights Movement" recreates the heat and excitement of the southern civil rights movement at the height of its power. Lyon conveys the genuinely multi-racial nature of the early movement, which was one of the most successful grassroots efforts in American history.

But as the Rodney King beating case in Los Angeles and the riots that followed its outcome made painfully clear, racial tensions still haunt this country, and the more than 200 photographs included in Lyon's book are all the more compelling because they call to mind our present as well as our past.

Lyon's combination of photographs and recollections tells a powerful, and also personal, story as he gives his firsthand impressions of some of the most violent and dramatic moments of civil rights history.

In the summer of 1962, Lyon, a white, 20-year-old University of Chicago history student, packed two cameras and hitchhiked south to record the struggle for civil rights. Within a week he was in jail in Albany, Ga., looking through the bars at another prisoner, Martin Luther King Jr.

Soon, the native New Yorker became SNCC's first staff photographer. He held that position until 1964, when he left it in part because of an emerging focus on Black consciousness within the organization. Two years later, SNCC excluded whites from membership.

Even those who are too young to remember those turbulent years have seen some of the drama of the civil rights era in old television news clips. But those glimpses are incomplete, and Lyon reminds us that in the early days, the civil rights movement did not always attract the media coverage that we have come to expect today.

For example, he explains that at a 1962 demonstration in Cairo, Ill., "there was no press, no video cameras (of course), no film cameras, no police and no reporters." For just this reason, SNCC needed a photographer of its own to document its fight for justice.

But Lyon's compelling pictures are more than just a record of marches, jailings, and protests. They take us inside the movement—to the meetings, organizing work, and voter registration drives that were the less visible, but not less important side of the struggle.

Some of these photographs, those Lyon took in July and August of 1964, were lost for 24 years and came to light only when a photo agency in New York moved its offices and, by chance, unearthed them. They are published in the new book for the first time.

Lyon's text is just as revealing as his photographs, and his own experiences while traveling through the South are stark reminders of the days of Jim Crow.

For example, he often had to walk miles through town, because it was against the law for Black taxi drivers to carry white passengers, and white drivers often would not go to the Black section of town, which was usually Lyon's destination.

And in 1963, when they arrived at the airport in Selma, Ala., Julian Bond and Lyon feared that a Black man and a white man traveling as coworkers might cause a commotion. So, they agreed that Bond, one of the founders of SNCC, would pose as Lyon's servant, calling him "Boss," and carrying all the baggage. The ploy apparently worked, as the two boarded their plane without incident.

Urban Concern, Inc. co-founders are honored by Columbus teachers' group

The co-founders of a church-based organization working to offer hope and educational opportunities to Windsor Terrace residents will be honored at 8 p.m., Jan. 14, at the Hyatt Regency's Delaware Room, 8 p.m. during the Columbus Education Association's 14th annual award banquet.

Jim Swearingen and Dexter Coleman will be given the CEA's 1993 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Humanitarian Award. The awardees serve as co-leaders of an urban ministry in the north eastside housing project. Through their example, they demonstrate to youth and families of this inner-city neighborhood the principals of racial reconciliation taught by Dr. King.

Swearingen serves as executive director of Urban Concern, Inc., a non-profit corporation formed in April of 1990 by Xenos Christian Fellowship, a predominantly white church.

Its purpose is to break the cycle of poverty and hopelessness. Urban Concern is committed to developing leaders who will play an active role in restoring their own community. Urban Concern's volunteers were recognized in July, 1992 as the 833rd Daily Point of Light by the White House.

Previously, Swearingen served as a teacher at Xenos Christian Fellowship and was director of its Service Ministry, which is an effort to activate the more than 3,000 church members into community service and volunteer activities. He is married and has three children.

Dexter Coleman is in his sixth year as prison Chaplain at Pickaway Correctional Institute. His goal is to work with young people to help them avoid a life of crime and drug abuse. He also serves as Elder and Director of Community Outreach Ministries at Xenos Christian Center, a predominantly African-American church.

Coleman served as chaplain at Harper Grace and Samaritan Hospitals in Detroit and Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, Michigan.

He has training in pastoral counseling, psychiatric and social counseling and clinical pastor training. He has attended Wayne State University, Christ Bible College in Detroit and Liberty University. He is married and has three children.

By joining ranks, this year's Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Humanitarian Award winners have exemplified the very heart and spirit of Dr. King's dream for America. On June 4 - 5, Swearingen and Coleman will be presiding at a conference on racial reconciliation in Columbus, Ohio.

Swearingen and Coleman join an impressive list of previous recipients including Arthur J. Kobacker, Janet Jackson, Angela Pace, Philip A. Locke, Edna Lorena Bryce, Ben Espy, Phale Hale, Amos H. Lynch Sr., Barbee William Durham, Robert M. Duncan, Benson Wolman, Jack Gibbs, Watson Walker, Loretta Heard, Clifford Tyree and David D. Hamlar.

UPI - Bettmann

She should have given up her seat. Just 36 years ago, there was a law in Montgomery, Alabama, that said

so.

It demanded that Rosa

Parks move to the back of the bus and let the white passenger sit in front. But Rosa Parks decided to stay put. And it took the Montgomery Police Department to move her. Yet that one decision, by one small woman, moved a nation. It started a bus boycott that grew into one of the most significant events of the Civil Rights Movement. And, in time, Mrs. Parks' action became a symbol of courage and justice for Americans everywhere.

NBD Bank salutes Rosa Parks and the decision she made. Though few of us are ever faced with a dilemma so large, sooner or later, we all have to choose whether or not to stand fast for what we believe. Rosa Parks knew what to do. And all of us are better for it.

The right bank can make a difference.

Community invited to Capital's Martin Luther King Jr., "Day of Learning"

Otterbein also has scheduled events.

Capital University is sponsoring Martin Luther King Jr., Day of Learning: "Where Do We Go From Here?" on Monday, Jan. 18, 1993.

Following on the success of last year's "day of learning" at Capital, full-schedule of workshops and discussions has been developed by a committee of university students, faculty and staff.

Because of the importance of the event, all undergraduate and law school classes (day and evening) are not being held. The community is invited to join with students, faculty and staff at the events on the university's Bexley campus.

"Although some progress has been made, racial unrest and social justice continue to plague this nation," said Josiah Blackmore, president of Capital University. "Through our day of learning, we seek to demonstrate to others and remind ourselves, of the absolute necessity to appreciate diversity and promote understanding on our own campus, as well as in our society at large."

"This event is not an isolated expression of our commitment, but part of a continuing effort to do what we can to motivate our university community to actively do its part in addressing this issue both in the classroom and beyond our campus."

The day will begin with an address by Dr. Marvin A. McMickle, pastor of Antioch Baptist Church in Cleveland, at 9 p.m. in Mees Auditorium. In addition to his pastoral responsibilities, McMickle is the current president of the Cleveland branch of the NAACP, and a member of several boards of trustees, including the United Way Services of Greater Cleveland; the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Cleveland Chapter; Karamu House and the Gateway Economic Development Corp. After earning a bachelor's degree from Aurora College in Illinois in 1970, McMickle continued his studies at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, where he earned a master of divinity.

In 1983, he received a doctorate from Princeton Theological Seminary. During his career, McMickle has preached at more than 20 colleges, universities and seminaries in the United States, as well as at numerous churches, community agencies and hospitals.

Following McMickle's address, several workshops will be held simultaneously from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m. Session topics include: "News From Nowhere: Bias in News Reporting" — featuring a panel of Columbus and Dayton news reporters; "Historical Perspective on the 1992 Los Angeles Riots: Where Do We Go From Here ... Chaos or Community?" — led by Dr. Jane Gray and Dr. Tom Maroukis of Capital University; "Prophet, Peace and Justice" — a look at Martin Luther King's role as a prophet by Trinity Lutheran Seminary professor Dr. Rudolph Featherstone; "On the Road to Brown ... and Columbus (Busing for Integration vs. Neighborhood Schools)" — a group discussion on the advantages and disadvantages of desegregation; and "Hate Groups" — a discussion regarding the appeal and impact of racial hate groups in America by Nommo X, from the African Center for Study and Worship.

Following a lunch break, the morning workshops will be repeated from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. along with two additional offerings: "Oppression and Diversity: An Introductory Workshop" — Dr. Carolyn O'Grady, multicultural education specialist, will assist workshop participants in looking at the ways social diversity effects each of their lives; and "Mississippi Burning" — participants will view this powerful motion picture starring Gene Hackman, then participate in a discussion led by Dr. Charlie Jones of Capital University. All workshops will be held in the Ruff Memorial Learning Center on Capital's Bexley campus.

Throughout the day, the movies "Eyes on the Prize: Bridge to Freedom" and "King" will be shown, as well as the video "Speeches of Dr. King". A showing of "Mississippi Burning" will be repeated at 9 a.m. in the Crusader Club of the Harry C. Moores Campus Center.

All events are free and open to the public. In addition, campus visitors are welcome to eat lunch in the Campus Center from 11:30 to 1:30 p.m. The cost is $4.50 per person. For further information call 236-6801.

Otterbein will have their Seventh Annual Convocation to help commemorate the national holiday on Monday, January 18th, 1993 at 10 a.m. Rev. C. Dexter Wise of Faith Ministry Church on Cleveland Ave., will be the keynote speaker.

Judge Keith to keynote MLK celebration at OSU

Ohio State's Office of Minority Affairs continues to carry on the dream of slain civil rights leader, Martin Luther King, Jr., by paying tribute to him January 14, 1993.

The 21st annual MLK, Jr., Tribute will start at 4:45 p.m. with an art exhibit and reception in Bricker Hall. The exhibit—"Art expressions" will showcase paintings by nine OSU undergraduate art students in the first floor lobby of Bricker. Works by Ralph Bell and other artists who are disabled can be viewed in the second floor lobby of Bricker where the reception will be held.

At 6:30 p.m., a symbolic MLK, Jr., march will be led from Bricker Hall down 17th, a couple of blocks to Weigel Auditorium. At 7 p.m., scholar and dynamic orator, the Honorable Damon Keith Judge in the United States Court of Appeals for the 6th District will give the keynote address.

School, and the L.L.M. from Wayne State University School of Law. In addition, some 25 institutions which include Wayne State University, Howard University, Michigan State University, Morehouse College, and Georgetown University have awarded him with Honorary Doctorate Degrees.

He has also been keynote speaker for the Black Law Students Association at Harvard Law School and lecturer in the Frank Strong Lecture Series here at The Ohio State University Law School.

Judge Keith's publications and honors are numerous and noteworthy as evidence by his latest Presidential appointment to the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution and the chairman of the Citizens Council for Michigan Public Universities.

Other significant awards include the Michigan Chronicle Outstanding Citizen Award, Spingarn Medal of the NAACP (Previous recipients of this award have been Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., The Honorable Justice Thurgood Marshall and The Honorable William H. Hastie), Award for Outstanding Contributions to the Black Community, human Rights Day Award, Afro-Asian Institute.

Award, Civil Right Lecture Award, Black Achievement Award and he has been featured in Ebony Magazine's "One Hundred Most Influential Black Americans".

The Dream Of A King

The dream of this King was to let freedom ring;
He made hearts and many voices sing;
His lust for equal justice, concerning the dark deprived man;
He showed America a powerful and King hand;
His insight on the world was ingenious and real;
His spirit and his righteousness lingers on;
His seed of truth is keeping Black America strong;
And the dream he had was a vision of God;
But the fair-skinned man found it to be very odd;
The power of his voice still carries on;
It rings in people's head from dusk to dawn;
The needed amount of fairness that he should have received;
Did not stop his mind in what he truly believed;
In this country leadership is easily given;
Yet this leader was pushed, battered, and driven;
The beautiful grace on his face;
Would put every bad minded person in their rightful place;
Since the good will always out-weigh the bad;
The loss of his soul should not make you sad;
For this soul is resting in a peaceful dream;
I am talking about nobody but the mighty MARTIN LUTHER KING.

Dolphins, 49ers proves offense gets you there

For the four teams it has been a long, tough, and at times, embarrassing road to walk. But they will put all that aside when the Miami Dolphins make their Superbowl run against the Buffalo Bills and the San Francisco 49ers will take it to the Dallas Cowboys. Remember you read it here first.

Though it could be said that my predictions of a Dolphins and 49ers Superbowl XXVII matchup stem from my Steelers and Eagles losing to the Bills and Cowboys, that simply is not the case.

Traditionally the main ingredient to going and winning championships is defense. But tradition has been tossed aside, as the 49ers potent offense has landed them in "The Show" on several occasions against the Bills, who have also been known for offensive output.

This year will be no different. Commentary: The Dolphins are due for an appearance. Not to say that the Bills aren't due for a ring, but they have had two consecutive chances.

Facts: The only difference that separates these two teams is experience. A substance that weighed the Steelers down against the Bills. Experience of winning and the pressure to win will propel Buffalo to perform.

Kelly will be expected to start, but will his timing be off? Buffalo will rely on the wheels of Thurman Thomas, who finds ways to play the game of his life against Miami, but hasn't played extremely well in post-season play thus far.

In Miami, they will have the crowd. They will have Dan Marino, and he will have the Mark Duce and Keith Jackson. That alone will not guarantee victory. What will push them above the Bills, is the lack of pressure.

Miami does have a few defensive notables, but more importantly they will out score Buffalo. The Dolphins will stop the run of Thomas and make Kelly throw the ball, in hopes that his timing will not work in his favor.

The Domesday Defense shut down the Eagles for the second time in three tries. The last shut down was done to perfection. But Dallas will have to compete with more than just Randall Cunningham, like they did last Sunday.

When the Cowboys line up in San Francisco, they will have to keep both eyes on Jerry Rice, John Taylor, Ricky Watters, and Steve Young. They just have more than enough ways to get the job done.

Yes, the Cowboys have Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin, but that doesn't compare with the arsenal of the 49ers, who also have more experience than the Cowboys.

These predictions are risky, according to some sports fans that I've conveyed this message to, but who else could better make these assessments than a man who said in the beginning of the season that the big plays are the ones that were NOT made. Ask any Steeler named Shelton.

See you in Pasadena, CA.

OSU team signs 2 DeSales students

Ohio State men's gymnastics coach Peter Kormann has announced that two Columbus gymnasts will join his team for the 1993-94 season.

Drew Durbin and Blaine Wilson, both from DeSales High School and the Columbus Gymnastics Academy, have signed national letters-of-intent with the Buckeyes and will attend OSU beginning next fall.

"I think Drew and Blaine are the best two high school gymnasts in the country," Kormann says. "Both have done well academically as well. Signing them means a bright future for Ohio State gymnastics." Wilson is the two-time defending Ohio all-around state champion. He and Durbin have led DeSales to three consecutive state championships. At last year's U.S. National Championships, Wilson qualified for Team Atlanta, the United States gymnastics Federation's squad that is pointing toward the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta. He is the only high school gymnast on that team. Wilson also represented the United States at the South African competition, placing fifth in the all-around.

Durbin is the 22nd-ranked gymnast in the country, based upon his performance at the U.S. national Championships last year at St. John Arena, one of the qualifying meets for last year's Summer Olympic games. He was the 1989 Junior Olympic national champion in the all-around before moving up to the senior level.

Dennis McIntyre coached Durbin and Wilson at both DeSales High School and the Columbus Gymnastics Academy.

Win over nation's best bring hope to OSU

Road trip could be trouble

By AHMED J. BUNDICK
Call and Post Sports Writer

One would have had a difficult time deciding which of the two teams were ranked eighth in the nation. Considering Ohio State's game-low of 11 turnover and nine steals in their 92-81 win over Iowa, they would have been the obvious choice.

Wrong. The Hawkeyes, who had won 11 straight games before Big Ten play and flaunted an AP and CNN/USA Today ranking for the fifth week in a row, placed another slash in the loss column, this time inside St. John Arena, Saturday night.

Scorching from the trey arch, guards Greg Simpson, Jamie Skelton and Doug Etzler hit 11 of 18 shots. Simpson, a freshman had a career-high of 23 points including four of four shooting from the three point line.

"We just got a lot of easy shots from their press," said Skelton, who posted 21 points, five rebounds and four assists. There were a lot of shots taken with no defenders around.

Ohio State, 9-2, 2-0, again came out with the three guard scheme against Iowa's triple forward package and rained jumpshots from all over the floor. Ohio State negotiated 40 shots, nailing 17 (nine three's) in the first half, which they led 48-27.

Iowa, 11-2, 0-2, led by center Acie Earl, shot only 30 percent shooting of eight of 26 from the floor in the first half. Twenty-two turnovers played a big part in their struggling. That was the biggest surprise in the game, not Ohio State's three-point onslaught, said Iowa coach Tom Davis.

"I thought they would come down and shoot," said Davis. "I knew going in that was an area we had to improve. Ohio State executed very well. I thought they were quicker and they knew what they had to do."

Before Iowa's first Big Ten loss to Indiana, they led the Big Ten in rebounding, field goals, free throws and defense. They did manage to win the battle in the paint, out-rebounding OSU 49-38, and shot 42 percent for the game compared to OSU's 40. Ohio State won in turnover, steals, free throws and the score.

them in the 22nd spot of the USA/CNN poll.

"People underestimate us," said Funderburke, who scored 13 points and

"They were playing aggressive and going after the boards," said Ohio State forward Lawrence Funderburke. "In the second half, they hit three's and were gaining momentum. We let them back in the game, but we hung in there."

Ohio State was predicted to finish seventh in the 11-team conference. Yet, after three Big Ten games, the Buckeyes could find themselves alone at the top or in second. The win over Iowa placed grabbed five rebounds. We are the defending Big Ten-champs and are playing for another title. People know our potential. We put 40 minutes together."

Funderburke had the pleasure of defending Earl, almost by himself. Aside from an occasional double team, the 6-foot-10 center had his way with a 13 points, 12 rebounds, and five blocked shots performance. Iowa was led by Val

Bames, who chipped in a game-high 27 points, but recorded five turnovers.

"We really liked the way we played tonight," Randy Ayers, Ohio State head coach said. "We wanted to stay aggressive against their pressure. They did a great job getting back in the game. We started thinking about situation basketball under five minutes (remaining in the game). We didn't handle it well."

Ayers admitted that the performance by Simpson was one they expected from him sooner or later.

"Simpson did a great job offensively and defensively," said Ayers, the winningest coach in the Big Ten. "He comes out and works hard everyday. This is the result of his hard work. I told (the guards) if they had a good look at the basket and were on balance, they had permission to shoot it. He looked to be aggressive when shooting the three."

When shooting the three, Simpson was unconscious.

The freshman has hit eight straight treys, dating back to his five of seven three-point performance in a 71-68 win against Penn State last week. "He got on fire," Skelton said jokingly of his teammate.

"I have been working all week on my three-point shots," said Simpson. Ohio's Mr. Basketball last year. "Coach Ayers needed a freshman to step up. I'm not going to back down. I was looking for the three. The coach said, 'If you have a good look at the basket, take the shot.'"

After taking on 19th ranked Michigan State Wednesday night, Ohio State visits Wisconsin, Indiana, ranked fourth, and Michigan, ranked third.

SECOND SHOTS--With 3:13 remaining in the game, Iowa's coach Tom Davis complained about five second being spent, while the ball was not in play. Randy Ayers, seeing Davis out of the coaches box began screaming at the officials and at Davis, wanting a technical. It was never issued.

"They ran off the clock," Davis said after the game. "That can happen. It wasn't much, but I wanted to acknowledge it. It was a mental thing. Ayers was upset about something that happened prior to that. He was also upset that was out of the coaches' box and got no tech. I was upset that he was upset."

Ayers, who later shook Davis' hand after the argument, said, "I didn't see the clock running. I was concerned about him being in the box, but the official said he had a legitimate gripe."

McCullough voted Freshman of The Year

By Stuart Mason
Call and Post Contributing Sports Writer

Tailback Deland McCullough of Miami University (O.) was voted the Mid-American Conference Freshman of the Year by the league's News Media Association.

McCullough, an Ohio native, led the conference in rushing this season with an average of 114 yards per game in nine games. McCullough was the top freshman runner in Division I-A and is ranked ninth in the nation.

The 5'11, 179-pound McCullough finished the season with a school record seven straight 100-yard games and was the first freshman in Miami Redskins history to gain 1,000 yards in a single season. He also finished just 30 yards shy of the MAC record of 1,064 rushing yards by a freshman, a record set by Ball State's Bernie Parmelee in 1987.

who is the team's leading scorer, scored 13 in the first quarter and 14 in the third. Supporting Irvin in the attack were Jens Gordon 17 points, 10 rebounds and six blocked shots; Richard Hollis 19 points and Mark Wade with 16 assists.

Mouth protectors provided for high school b-ballers

A joint project of the Academy of Medicine of Columbus and Franklin, Columbus Dental Society, the Columbus Health Department and the Columbus Public Schools will enable all varsity basketball players in the Columbus Public School to wear protective mouth guards.

Players were custom-fitted by volunteer dentists at Centennial, Eastmoor, Northland, and West High Schools. The mouth protectors are being provided to each student for a nominal fee of one dollar.

Representatives of the sponsoring organizations have worked for more than one year on the project. "In addition to providing mouth protection for Columbus high school boys and girls participating in varsity basketball, we hope that schools and communities throughout Ohio will be stimulated to organize similar efforts," said Delphis C. Richardson, M.D., chair of the Academy of Medicine Sports Medicine Committee.

Nancy Goorey, DDS, Columbus Dental Society, Committee

on Mouth Protectors, also stated, "Coaches and parents must be made aware of the high potential for oral injury in sports, including basketball, which do not have mandatory mouth protector rules. This project will insure that Columbus players involved will have that protection."

The project was initiated after the highly successful production of the video tape "Give Your Mouth a Sporting Chance," which was produced by the Columbus-based Council on Health Information, the Ohio Dental Association, the Ohio Osteopathic Association, and the Ohio State Medical Association. This tape, featuring former Ohio State University and Boston Celtics star John Havlicek, was distributed free to all Ohio high schools. The video tape portrays several serious injuries resulting from an athlete not wearing a mouth protector.

Currently, the Ohio High School Athletic Association mandates that mouth protectors be worn only for football, field hockey and ice hockey.

Freshman

Swingman Richard Hollis is starting to become another go-to-guy as he now ranks second on the team in scoring at 14.2 ppg and 6.4 rpg. He had a season-high of 30 points against LaCrosse recently.

Recently, Rochester and Columbus combined to set a new CBA record for fewest points in a game (141). While the 68 points was a franchise all-time low for the Horizon, their defense set the club record for fewest points allowed (73).

Guard Sedric Toney will represent the Horizon in the American Airlines CBA Long Distance Shootout to be held before the CBA All-Star Game this week in Oklahoma City. Toney will attempt to continue the Horizon's domination of that event. Duane Washington won the crown last season as did Barry Stevens the year before.

There are only five players still with the Horizon who were in training camp. They are Sedric Toney, Byron Irvin, Kermit Holmes, Ron Spivey and Jens Gordon. The rest of the squad consists of Mark Wade, Richard Hollis, Jim Farmer, LeRon Ellis and Paul Afeaki.

COLLEGES

Jackson State University senior offensive tackle Lester Holmes attracted a lot of attention this past season for his prowess as a top-notch offensive lineman. Holmes, who graded out at 95 percent or better in each of the Tigers' games this season, has been invited to play in the prestigious Senior Bowl in Mobile, Alabama in January of 1993. Holmes is 6'3 and weighs 284 pounds.

Southern Methodist's Board of Trustees upheld a task force recommendation to back a Division I-A athletic program. The football program was nearly disbanded after SMU was put on probation by the NCAA in 1987 for paying players. It's been a long climb back to respectability, with the Mustangs winning five games in 1992.

ELSEWHERE IN SPORTS

Former tennis star Arthur Ashe, who publicly acknowledged in 1992 that he had contracted the HIV virus which causes AIDS, has been selected the 1992 recipient of the Sports Legend Award by the American Sportscasters Association. Ashe was the first U.S. Black male tennis player to win the U.S. Open and Wimbledon.

One man, a preacher's son,
Said non-violence
Was the only way
To change the laws
And win the hearts of men
So all of us
Could share a brighter day.

We remember one man
who made a difference,
Martin Luther King, Jr.

Mother

Clara, who now has custody of Claudia's eight-year-old son, said women are simply afraid to speak out against their abusers.

"Women stay in these abusive relationships for their children's sake or for material reasons," Clara said. "You can replace material things but you can't replace a life. Claudia worked hard as a financial counselor at the Columbus State Community College."

"Everything that she and Roger owned, she earned it. Women have to realize that they must speak up and get out. There are many battered women's organizations in Columbus to assist them. However, these women really love their husbands and are willing to go an extra mile. That extra mile cost Claudia her life."

Not every domestic violence situation ends in tragedy. A lot of women do get out and begin new lives.

Sherlene Thompson said 1993 is not just another new year to her, but the beginning of a new life for her and her three children, Cheryl, Danielle and Wesley.

Thompson relocated to Columbus last year after leaving her crack-addicted husband in Chicago, Ill. Thompson said she was abused for over 18 years. When asked why she stayed in the marriage for so long, she simply says "I didn't think I could survive on my own."

Not only is Thompson surviving at the age of 49, she will be attending college at Columbus State

Community College as a computer science major.

Although she is no longer in a domestic violence situation, she and her children still carry the scars from that experience. Thompson has missing teeth, a thumb that has to be rebroken to correct its deformity, scars from being stabbed with a screwdriver, and low self-esteem. In addition, her children are two years behind in their academic studies because her husband would not allow them to attend school.

"The saddest part about experiencing a life without the day-to-day fear of being abused is that I could have done what I am doing many years ago before my children were affected by it," Thompson said. "However, I know that God will heal the scars that my children and I bear."

There are many organizations available to help battered women. One of Central Ohio's newest organizations is Decision Center, Inc. It is a Christian-based shelter that addresses the combined needs of Christian families living in domestic violence situations and the special needs of Black women.

"I began this organization because of my own history of surviving three marriages that involved different forms of domestic violence," said Cheryl Wilcox, founder and director of the non-profit organization.

This center has counseling services that examines the many issues associated with domestic violence from a Christian perspective.

"God doesn't want women to remain with men who abuse their spouses," said Wilcox. "That's a devil's lie. God wants people who are healthy -- spiritually, mentally, and physically."

Wilcox said her ex-husband killed his girlfriend shortly after she divorced him. "He had threatened me in the past," she said. "If I had stayed, I could have been the one who was killed."

"I believe women should take men's threats very seriously," said Wilcox. "You cannot read the future. You cannot be selfish. You have to think about your children and others who are in your life."

The 2 1/2 year old program has just moved into an expanded shelter that will hold up to five families -- women and children. The center holds weekly counseling programs for women who just need someone to talk about their problems.

"There are people out here who are willing to work with women involved in domestic violence if they are willing to come forward and talk about it," said Wilcox. "Keeping silent will do nothing but place you in greater danger."
